Student fees board

Evergreen's process for allocating student Services and Activities fees money will begin this month. An eight-member student board has been randomly selected and will soon be ready to consider requests for funding from the approximately $40,000 in the S and A funds.

Early last year a DTF of eight students was assembled to draw up a proposal for the allocation of student funds. The finished and adopted proposal has not been without controversy. Selection of the DTF was disputed on the grounds that students had no voice in it and that it may not have fairly represented different segments of the community.

The idea of random computer selection of the eight-member board was challenged by minority groups on campus because they felt they could not be fairly represented by someone outside their own racial, ethnic or cultural group.

As a result, the computer has been programmed to select a percentage of minority representation. This may not be the best solution, but it at least is a recognition of the fact that simple random selection does not meet all human and community needs.

It has been suggested that this procedure is not the most efficient way to allocate the funds. It is generally agreed that the process is open for evaluation and change, but could involve bureaucratic tangles.

Terms of the first eight members will be staggered-three sitting for three months, four sitting for two months and three for one month. From then on a board member's term will last three months, so there won't be one massive turnover.

Now that the machinery is finally rolling, funding requests can soon be submitted. There are no requirements for the manner in which they need to be made, but the board may set some.

In the meantime proposals should be in narrative form and develop the following points: assessment of need or interest, development of the proposal, actual functioning of activity and an evaluation process. An itemized budget and time schedule for expenditures should be included.

Any interested in receiving S and A fees may contact Pete Steinberg or Larry Stenberg for assistance in developing a proposal. Also, everyone is invited to attend a meeting for further information on the procedure at 4 p.m. Wednesday Jan. 12, in Room 1420.

College is accreditation candidate

TESC has been approved as a candidate for accreditation in the Northwest Association of Secondary and Higher Schools, according to President A. J. McCann.

In a letter to McCann, the association's executive director said: "Candidates for accreditation will be listed in the 1972 issue of Accredited Institutions of Higher Education for the Federation of Regional Accrediting Commissions of Higher Education. Candidates usually qualify for federally sponsored programs, the director noted. Also, the Veteran's Administration intends candidates the same as fully accredited institutions.

"For students transferring to other institutions, we recommend that their transcripts be evaluated as if from a fully accredited institution," he observed.

It is almost unprecedented for a new college to advance to candidacy for accreditation after only one quarter of operation, according to McCann. "This is a real tribute to our faculty, staff and students and to the long hours that have gone into the planning of the college during these four years," he said.

Evaluations for full accreditation usually occur after a school graduates its first major group of students. In Evergreen's case, this should happen within three years.

Evergreen received correspondence status in June, 1968, following an official visit by a team from the association. In September, 1971, the college completed an analysis report as part of the candidacy for accreditation procedure.

A three-member association team visited the campus on Nov. 3 to conduct a general evaluation. The evaluation team reviewed the college's organization, general purposes, finances, physical plant, library, administrative structure, instructional staff, educational program and general policies and programs relating to students.

Help yourselves

One of the original objectives of this paper is to improve communications within the college. However, since we are understaffed, we have not been able to gather information on such special interest groups, weekly program activities and evaluations.

First, we are asking for input from such programs - by faculty or students - to stimulate interest and participation in program activities.

Second, we need more people to write, draw and photograph for the paper. If you are interested please come to our weekly planning session tomorrow at 3 p.m. in 3236. We need community support!
All letters to the Paper Co-operative are welcome. Such contributions will be printed as space allows.

In order for letters and guest editorials to be printed, each must carry the full name as well as the address and local phone number of the author. Unsigned letters or those submitted with pseudonyms will not be published, unless names will be withheld at request.

Ordinary correspondence must be typed and limited to 250 words or less. The Paper Co-operative reserves the right to edit for matters of libel.

Contributions may be submitted to the newspaper office in Library Room 3216.

MECHA salutes Bill

When some MECHA members approached Mr. Bill Kenworthy, of the cream for food service, on the question of union and non-union letters we were pleasantly surprised to hear that Bill was well up on the letters issue. He assured us that he was doing what he could to respect the issues of the Chicano and the union struggles. Kelt, words and promises have been made before and quite frankly, we had the feeling that "the road to hell is paved with good intentions." Surprised? Today I went to the cream bar to have a hamburger and was about to refuse the letter when Bill walked up behind me. He sent me a non-union letter and quite tasty he was. He was right and it even made me feel good to know that the man is trying and more important, doing it. Thanks Bill!

Grass, anyone?

To the staff of the Paper

I am interested in finding other people on campus who want to get involved for the purpose of discussing the writings of the German novelist and playwright Guenter Grass. Grass is the author of The Tin Drum and The Mouse, Dog Years, and most recently, Local Anesthetics. Besides being a consummate stylist, Grass has managed to create a literature which is "German" in the way Joyce's writing is Irish: humorous, critical, reflecting a sense of the collective mind of post-war Germany, with a care and understanding that is rare in any modern literature.

Get a hold of these books if you haven't read them. If you have, contact me in Library room 2003. Grass is also a poet, a scholar and a politician. Interdisciplinary Grass.

Todos tapados (mental irregularity)

Ignorance was the most outstanding characteristic that the board of trustees was able to display at their recent appearance at the TESC campus in their last meeting. The large group of minorities present weren't the least surprised as to the darkness that suffused the brightness of the trustees. Such subtle clothes as "We understand your problems" seemed to fuse from their arrant mouths.

The governor must have been having a nightmare when he chose the present board of trustees or perhaps his similarities to each other resulted in his unqualified judgement. The trustees should have the knowledge and foresight to produce some kind of meaningful solution to the students problems but they are so busy paring other such arts that they can't see down their glasses. The board continues trucking blindly you can sense yourself that they will run into a dead end while they trample the problem saturated street of the minority.

Residents want planner for Cooper Point area

Determined to avoid another unorganized confrontation with the county commissioners, the Cooper Point Association (CPA) met last Wednesday to feel out public opinion on a development plan proposal for the point. The association's interim board, headed by Bill Dexter, Cooper Point resident and lawyer, has compiled the hiring of a full-time planner who would draw up a comprehensive development plan for the point.

According to the CPA, the county doesn't have the time or money to produce a plan that would "accommodate growth on reasonable terms which is consistent with the character of the earth."

However, CPA believes that the Peaceacre incident proves the commissioners are willing to give in to economic pressures for rezoning with little if any advance planning.

Last November the commissioners nearly approved rezoning ordinance to allow unplanned residential development of the Peaceacre plot south of campus. Little information was provided by the developers on density, transportation, or open space. The ordinance is dead for now, but a stay of execution will be reconsidered by the commissioners in February.

In the meantime CPA wants to take the positive step of aiding the commissioners in planning point development. They have approved a proposal to raise $15,000 to hire the planner.

This planner would translate development ideas of residents into one plan and would contract for services provided by the CPA.

Several present at the meeting disagreed of having the CPA planner in the courthouse, contending that this would jeopardize CPA control over him. However, residents were assured that the planner would be a CPA employee and would only use survey materials and public records provided by the county.

The biggest debate was on how binding the completed plan would be to the commissioners. Several favored the optimistic view that the commissioners would accept it, while others favored an organized legal and political backing.

The immediate need of raising the $15,000 was stressed by Ron Clark, resident and professional planner.

"If we don't come up with a good plan, sometime this year and uncontrolled individual development will start," he said.

Residential Forum tomorrow

Legislative Forum tomorrow

Should state politicians be required to disclose their campaign expenditures? Should all donations made to elected office-holders be part of the public record? These are a sample of the questions which will be raised at the first session of the Legislative Forum at 9 a.m., Jan. 8, in the Olympia City Hall.

Legislative Forum, sponsored jointly by the League of Women Voters, Evergreen College Community Organization, YWCA, and the American Association of University Women, is a series of weekly meetings held during each legislative session to keep the public informed on the issues being considered by the legislature.

In addition to the court-imposed necessity of redistricting the state, this special session of the legislature was called by Governor Dan Evans. There are several issues which the governor feels should not wait another full year before being considered by the legislature.

This executive-request bill package will be presented to the Legislative Forum by James Dolliver, administrative assistant to Governor Evans, at next Tuesday's Forum. Some of the topics to be included in the discussion will be economic tax reform, governmental reform, and people-participation type bills such as campaign financing. Dolliver has agreed to stay for a question and answer session following his presentation.

These sessions are free and open to the public and will be held on consecutive Tuesday mornings in city hall beginning at 9:30 a.m. followed by a 9:30 meeting. The meetings last until 10:30 or sometimes 12:00 when discussion is lively. Babysitting at a nominal fee will be provided at the First United Methodist Church.

PAGE 2  THE EVERGREEN STATE COLLEGE  January 10, 1972
A special Evergreen student art show will be held Jan. 18 and 19 in the second floor lobby of the library. Students are invited to enter their favorite works—paintings, sculptures, textiles, ceramics, jewelry, crafts, etc.—to be displayed by taking the items to Room 3125.

Two of the entries will be chosen a facilitated exhibit to be featured in the 1972 Governor's Invitational Exhibition of Washington Artists, scheduled Feb. 6 at the State Capitol Museum in Olympia and in the Evergreen Art Gallery (4th floor, Library).

The Invitational Exhibition, the major show of the annual Governor's Festival of the Arts, will include works by professional artists in Washington and, for the first time, works by students from the 16 public and private four-year colleges and universities in the state.

One of the 33 professional entrants will be awarded the Governor's Special Commendation from the governor. And, one of the 32 student entrants will receive the first Donald G. Heard Purchase Award, a $100 prize offered by Evergreen alumni. The late faculty member who was killed in an October 28 highway accident. Don't, a sculptor and painter, had been with Evergreen only a short time as a member of the Space, Time, and Form Program.

The Governor's Invitational show, sponsored by the museum in cooperation with Evergreen, will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. Feb. 6. Formal ceremonies and presentation of awards will be at the museum. Professional and student art works will be displayed at both the museum and the college.

Further information about the special exhibit at Evergreen and the February 6 showings may be obtained from Faculty Members Sid White and Peggy Dickson, from Director of Recreation and Campus Activities Pete Steinberg, or interested people should sign up at the information center.

Because many students, faculty, and staff of Evergreen are interested in photography, a film co-op has been organized to help counter the exceptionally high cost of film and materials.

The co-op is run on a total non-profit basis. Membership contributions are a minimum of five dollars, and are used as initial capital to buy film and supplies at the lowest possible price.

These supplies will then be available to members of the co-op at cost plus any shipping charges. A member may not at any time cancel his membership and will be refunded his initial donation in either cash and/or supplies. In short money is being turned into buying in large quantities, therefore attaining the lowest possible cost.

Exercise workshop

A newly organized project called Learning Workshop, which is affiliated with Thurston Youth Service Center, is in need of ideas, energy, materials and special skills.

Not yet funded the group wishes to provide an activity which Evergreeners could do or contribute for the floundering effect. The Olympia-area workshop will open today, Jan. 10, and will be open Monday through Friday afternoon and evenings. Essentially the service will be used by residents who are young or older and expected.

Participants will be starting out with a sexuality discussion group, then a cooking on, racism workshop, auto mechanics workshop, crafts workshop, basic gardening project, beginning guitar and whatever happens along.

The workshops sounds like it could be a great thing, the type of activity anyone would have enjoyed if it had been available in high school. Those eager to give somebody the opportunity should call Janet Stein at the workshop 943-8035, to see what can be done. Her number, if the phone has been re-connected, is 943-9656.

Transcendental meditation, as taught by Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, is a technique practiced by over 100,000 students in the United States and abroad. SIMS—Students International Meditation Society—is a rapidly growing campus movement in the United States which describes TM in this way: "TM is a natural technique which allows the conscious mind to experience increasingly more subtle states of thought until the source of thought, the unlimited reservoir of energy and creative intelligence is reached."

This simple technique, practiced twice a day in 15 to 20 minute periods, has helped to relieve the demands of all areas of life by alleviating stress, strain, and suffering in the individual. Students who meditate report that their studies improve as they seem to have more energy and greater peace of mind. The movement also has attracted housewives, businessmen and professional people who all report the same results from practicing the technique.

Dr. Robert C. Wallace, psychologist at Harvard Medical School, has been doing in-depth research on the effects of TM, and has published his findings in the "Physiological Effects of Transcendental Meditation" in Science; March 1970. He proposes that an individual actually experiences a fourth state of consciousness as he practices TM. This state, called "restful alertness," is defined by specific physiological changes such as reduced blood pressure, decreased cardiac output and increased skin resistance among others. These results distinguish this state from the common states of consciousness such as waking, dreaming, sleeping, and various forms of meditation such as hypnosis and conditioning. Further research is being carried out concerning the effects of TM on high blood pressure, hypertension and treatment of drug abuse.

As more and more studies conclude surprising, good results, more and more people begin the technique. And everyone who begins (anyone who can sit) can learn this process experiences immediate results.

SIMS is offering introductory lectures on Transcendental Meditation at Evergreen at 7:30 in lecture hall No. 5, and on Thursday, Jan. 13, at 10:00 p.m. in lecture hall No. 5.

Eighteen students will participate as interns in a newly-created nationwide voter registration program, receiving full academic credit for their working/learning efforts. The students, who comprise more than half of the total of collegians in the initial effort of the new Student Vote organization, headquartered in Washington, D.C. and coordinated by Director Rock Leville.

Student Vote is a nationwide program in which interns are placed in local areas to direct and organize voter registration drives which, hopefully, will occur in all 50 states during the Winter and Spring college terms. Although efforts will concentrate in the area of voter registration density and containing large college and university populations, the voter registration drive will be addressed to all age levels. A non-partisan organization, Student Vote is funded by voluntary contributions and by grants from the New World Foundation, Field Foundation, Rockefeller Brothers Foundation, Stern Family Fund, Norman Foundation, Jacob Kaplan Fund, and the Leonard and Sophie Davis Foundation.

The 18 Evergreen students were selected during a December 31 interview conducted in Olympia by the West Coast Student Vote Coordinator, Janet Bennett of Portland. Candidates were picked from the list of students who previously had made application for politically-connected internships through Cooperative Education Program.

Evergreen intern includes: Charles Miller, George Barner, Jr., both from the Political Ecology Coordinated Studies Program); Carolyn Savage, Craig Stewart, Dick Roberts, and Tim Moore (all from the Environmental Design Program); Thomas Armenian, Susan Noonan, Joe Renouard, Erik LeKoy, and Stephen Newell (all from the Individual, Citizen and State Program); Marrian Hansen, and Lila L. Allman (both from the Individual In America Program); Tim Schultz, and Cynthia McVay (both from the Causality, Freedom and Chance Program); Regen Usofod (from the Human Relations Program); Mark Sterret (Man and Art Program); and David Lewis (Human Behaviour Program).

The students will undergo an intensive three-day training seminar prior to beginning their field experience. The seminar, to be conducted by Washington, D.C., staff members of Student Vote, will be designed to familiarize the students with organizational methods and procedures, election laws of the states in which they will be interning, and skills necessary to their development as effective interns.

After those sessions, the students, along with 15 interns from a handful of other schools participating in Student Vote's first project, will be dispersed into several of the 50 states, where they will serve as co-supervisers of two voter registration projects, each of about six weeks lengths. The first intern will go into various areas under the direction of paid professional Student Vote staff. The second intern will organize and complete voter registration projects, Director of Cooperative Education Ken Donohue explained. "After each of these the student interns will write an analytical paper, describing the problems encountered, levels of success, the attitudes toward people of the Democratic process, etc. in other word, a very full report. Meanwhile, they will have had a chance to learn how the elective process works from the local to the national level."

Evaluations for credit will differ somewhat because our Student Vote interns come from several different Coordinated Studies Programs," Donohue explained. "Many of these programs have built-in internship options for interested students. The Student Vote project carries particular relevance to a number of programs because of its direct relationship to their group studies.

Evergreen will assume no responsibility for the Student Vote program, outside of some costs incurred in contacting prospective candidates–mostly by long distance telephone–to set up the internship during a holiday period in which the college student literally were scattered throughout the country. The Student Vote organization will pay all travel costs associated with the internship program and will provide students with food, lodging and 750 per week in pocket money for the entire quarter.

"We're very excited about this enterprise," Donohue said. "If the program continues–I think it will–we will be placing more student intern during Spring Semester. These internships will be right in line with one of Evergreen's basic objectives—to make these learning experiences resemble the 'real world' in which students must function when they leave college."

MECHA has been active in the past few months and many issues particularly with admission and recruiting policies. They are working on new program ideas for the coming year which may result in a more productive minorities study. The members have also been doing some public relations work in Olympia and surrounding communities. Presentations have been made to several of the schools and plans are underway to schedule civic group presentations.

AFL-CIO seeks bill readers during session

The special session of the Washington State Legislature opens today, Jan. 10. Encompassed in the many bills that will be considered this session are many that may have provisions opposed to- or supporting-the civil liberties of American citizens, but the American Civil Liberties Union does not know which bills take which stand as yet.

Since the Supreme Court of the United States is ruling out of the Warren era into a more repressive position, the ACLU is shifting its national focus from the courts to the Legislative process.

The local chapter is in need of bill readers to read the proposed bill that will be presented to the legislature. These readers will refer any bills of questionable content to the lawyers employed by the ACLU.

There is also a need for lobbyists. Anyone interested in assisting in reading or lobbying for legislation concerning during this session should get in contact with Torrie (CAM) at 3961.
