The Peace Tree

The Peace Accord

We pledge ourselves with integrity of purpose to make this land a prosperous one where we can all live, work and play together in peace and harmony.

The Tree

The National Peace Accord is not to be seen as a living, growing tree in the landscape, but as a symbol of the agreement that we have made as a country. It is intended to represent the unity and harmony that we strive for in our daily lives. The tree trunk is where the core of the tree is located, and represents the foundations of the peace accord. The branches of the tree represent the various elements of the accord, and the leaves are symbolic of the individuals who have signed the peace accord.

The Roots

The roots of the tree are where the tree is anchored, and represent the deep foundations of the accord. They are not visible, but are essential to the survival of the tree. Similarly, the peace accord is a foundation upon which we can build a better future for ourselves and our children.

The Soil

The soil under the tree is where the tree grows, and represents the environment in which we live. It is important to take care of the soil, as it is the foundation of our livelihood. The peace accord is also built on the soil of our nation, and we must work to protect it.

The Police

The police force is the backbone of the accord, and represents the enforcement of the peace accord. They are responsible for maintaining order and ensuring that the peace accord is upheld. The police force is also responsible for providing security and protection to all individuals.

The Judges

The judges are responsible for interpreting the peace accord, and ensuring that it is upheld in the courts. They are also responsible for enforcing the law and ensuring that justice is served.

The Codes of Conduct

The codes of conduct are guidelines that are designed to promote the values of the accord. They are intended to provide a framework for individuals to live by, and to help ensure that the peace accord is upheld.

Commission of Inquiry

The Commission of Inquiry is an important part of the accord, and is responsible for investigating violations of the accord. It is an independent body, and its decisions are final.

DANGEROUS WEAPONS

The peace accord is not intended to be a list of dangerous weapons, but rather a call for peace and cooperation. It is important to remember that weapons are not the solution to our problems, and that peace is the only way forward.

POLITICAL ORGANISATIONS

The accord is intended to be non-partisan, and is not intended to be a platform for political organisations. It is important to remember that the accord is about peace and cooperation, and not about politics.

The Peace Accord Text

A CONDENSED GUIDE TO THE NATIONAL PEACE ACCORD

The National Peace Accord was signed in Johannesburg on 27 April 1994 and is supported by all democratic political parties. It is a framework for peaceful change, providing the means to resolve differences and to move towards a truly democratic and united South Africa.

The accord is a call to all people to work together towards a better future for all. It is a commitment to peace and reconciliation, and to the values of democracy, human rights, and social justice.

Justice of the Peace

The accord is implemented by the Police, who are responsible for enforcing the accord and ensuring that it is upheld. The police force is supported by the judiciary, who are responsible for interpreting the accord and ensuring that it is upheld in the courts.

Peace and you

To make sure that everyone is free to exercise their rights and freedoms, it is important to support and respect both the Police and the judiciary. This includes respecting the police and the judiciary, and also respecting the rights of all individuals.

The accord is a call to all people to work together towards a better future for all. It is a commitment to peace and reconciliation, and to the values of democracy, human rights, and social justice.

A CONDENSED GUIDE TO THE NATIONAL PEACE ACCORD

The National Peace Accord was signed in Johannesburg on 27 April 1994 and is supported by all democratic political parties. It is a framework for peaceful change, providing the means to resolve differences and to move towards a truly democratic and united South Africa.

The accord is a call to all people to work together towards a better future for all. It is a commitment to peace and reconciliation, and to the values of democracy, human rights, and social justice.

Justice of the Peace

The accord is implemented by the Police, who are responsible for enforcing the accord and ensuring that it is upheld. The police force is supported by the judiciary, who are responsible for interpreting the accord and ensuring that it is upheld in the courts.

Peace and you

To make sure that everyone is free to exercise their rights and freedoms, it is important to support and respect both the Police and the judiciary. This includes respecting the police and the judiciary, and also respecting the rights of all individuals.

The accord is a call to all people to work together towards a better future for all. It is a commitment to peace and reconciliation, and to the values of democracy, human rights, and social justice.

A CONDENSED GUIDE TO THE NATIONAL PEACE ACCORD

The National Peace Accord was signed in Johannesburg on 27 April 1994 and is supported by all democratic political parties. It is a framework for peaceful change, providing the means to resolve differences and to move towards a truly democratic and united South Africa.

The accord is a call to all people to work together towards a better future for all. It is a commitment to peace and reconciliation, and to the values of democracy, human rights, and social justice.

Justice of the Peace

The accord is implemented by the Police, who are responsible for enforcing the accord and ensuring that it is upheld. The police force is supported by the judiciary, who are responsible for interpreting the accord and ensuring that it is upheld in the courts.

Peace and you

To make sure that everyone is free to exercise their rights and freedoms, it is important to support and respect both the Police and the judiciary. This includes respecting the police and the judiciary, and also respecting the rights of all individuals.

The accord is a call to all people to work together towards a better future for all. It is a commitment to peace and reconciliation, and to the values of democracy, human rights, and social justice.

A CONDENSED GUIDE TO THE NATIONAL PEACE ACCORD

The National Peace Accord was signed in Johannesburg on 27 April 1994 and is supported by all democratic political parties. It is a framework for peaceful change, providing the means to resolve differences and to move towards a truly democratic and united South Africa.

The accord is a call to all people to work together towards a better future for all. It is a commitment to peace and reconciliation, and to the values of democracy, human rights, and social justice.

Justice of the Peace

The accord is implemented by the Police, who are responsible for enforcing the accord and ensuring that it is upheld. The police force is supported by the judiciary, who are responsible for interpreting the accord and ensuring that it is upheld in the courts.

Peace and you

To make sure that everyone is free to exercise their rights and freedoms, it is important to support and respect both the Police and the judiciary. This includes respecting the police and the judiciary, and also respecting the rights of all individuals.

The accord is a call to all people to work together towards a better future for all. It is a commitment to peace and reconciliation, and to the values of democracy, human rights, and social justice.

A CONDENSED GUIDE TO THE NATIONAL PEACE ACCORD

The National Peace Accord was signed in Johannesburg on 27 April 1994 and is supported by all democratic political parties. It is a framework for peaceful change, providing the means to resolve differences and to move towards a truly democratic and united South Africa.

The accord is a call to all people to work together towards a better future for all. It is a commitment to peace and reconciliation, and to the values of democracy, human rights, and social justice.

Justice of the Peace

The accord is implemented by the Police, who are responsible for enforcing the accord and ensuring that it is upheld. The police force is supported by the judiciary, who are responsible for interpreting the accord and ensuring that it is upheld in the courts.

Peace and you

To make sure that everyone is free to exercise their rights and freedoms, it is important to support and respect both the Police and the judiciary. This includes respecting the police and the judiciary, and also respecting the rights of all individuals.

The accord is a call to all people to work together towards a better future for all. It is a commitment to peace and reconciliation, and to the values of democracy, human rights, and social justice.

A CONDENSED GUIDE TO THE NATIONAL PEACE ACCORD

The National Peace Accord was signed in Johannesburg on 27 April 1994 and is supported by all democratic political parties. It is a framework for peaceful change, providing the means to resolve differences and to move towards a truly democratic and united South Africa.

The accord is a call to all people to work together towards a better future for all. It is a commitment to peace and reconciliation, and to the values of democracy, human rights, and social justice.

Justice of the Peace

The accord is implemented by the Police, who are responsible for enforcing the accord and ensuring that it is upheld. The police force is supported by the judiciary, who are responsible for interpreting the accord and ensuring that it is upheld in the courts.

Peace and you

To make sure that everyone is free to exercise their rights and freedoms, it is important to support and respect both the Police and the judiciary. This includes respecting the police and the judiciary, and also respecting the rights of all individuals.

The accord is a call to all people to work together towards a better future for all. It is a commitment to peace and reconciliation, and to the values of democracy, human rights, and social justice.

A CONDENSED GUIDE TO THE NATIONAL PEACE ACCORD

The National Peace Accord was signed in Johannesburg on 27 April 1994 and is supported by all democratic political parties. It is a framework for peaceful change, providing the means to resolve differences and to move towards a truly democratic and united South Africa.

The accord is a call to all people to work together towards a better future for all. It is a commitment to peace and reconciliation, and to the values of democracy, human rights, and social justice.

Justice of the Peace

The accord is implemented by the Police, who are responsible for enforcing the accord and ensuring that it is upheld. The police force is supported by the judiciary, who are responsible for interpreting the accord and ensuring that it is upheld in the courts.

Peace and you

To make sure that everyone is free to exercise their rights and freedoms, it is important to support and respect both the Police and the judiciary. This includes respecting the police and the judiciary, and also respecting the rights of all individuals.

The accord is a call to all people to work together towards a better future for all. It is a commitment to peace and reconciliation, and to the values of democracy, human rights, and social justice.

A CONDENSED GUIDE TO THE NATIONAL PEACE ACCORD

The National Peace Accord was signed in Johannesburg on 27 April 1994 and is supported by all democratic political parties. It is a framework for peaceful change, providing the means to resolve differences and to move towards a truly democratic and united South Africa.

The accord is a call to all people to work together towards a better future for all. It is a commitment to peace and reconciliation, and to the values of democracy, human rights, and social justice.

Justice of the Peace

The accord is implemented by the Police, who are responsible for enforcing the accord and ensuring that it is upheld. The police force is supported by the judiciary, who are responsible for interpreting the accord and ensuring that it is upheld in the courts.

Peace and you

To make sure that everyone is free to exercise their rights and freedoms, it is important to support and respect both the Police and the judiciary. This includes respecting the police and the judiciary, and also respecting the rights of all individuals.

The accord is a call to all people to work together towards a better future for all. It is a commitment to peace and reconciliation, and to the values of democracy, human rights, and social justice.

A CONDENSED GUIDE TO THE NATIONAL PEACE ACCORD

The National Peace Accord was signed in Johannesburg on 27 April 1994 and is supported by all democratic political parties. It is a framework for peaceful change, providing the means to resolve differences and to move towards a truly democratic and united South Africa.

The accord is a call to all people to work together towards a better future for all. It is a commitment to peace and reconciliation, and to the values of democracy, human rights, and social justice.

Justice of the Peace

The accord is implemented by the Police, who are responsible for enforcing the accord and ensuring that it is upheld. The police force is supported by the judiciary, who are responsible for interpreting the accord and ensuring that it is upheld in the courts.

Peace and you

To make sure that everyone is free to exercise their rights and freedoms, it is important to support and respect both the Police and the judiciary. This includes respecting the police and the judiciary, and also respecting the rights of all individuals.

The accord is a call to all people to work together towards a better future for all. It is a commitment to peace and reconciliation, and to the values of democracy, human rights, and social justice.