

Guide to Week 2

- Projects Begin this Week. It is essential that you have read carefully all of the material available to you regarding projects because it is during this week that you must begin. For Marja's students, you can connect with your "project liaison" to get an idea of where you can begin with specific garden activities. Otherwise: Just do your best. If you are confused about something, don't worry. Since Marja is not available to answer questions right now, we will not be hard on anyone as you get oriented to your projects. Simply follow the directions carefully, take initiative and maybe some risk, and get started! A sincere effort is all that's expected! And, of course, posting the required assignments (log and reflections) to your web page.
- No Class on Saturday.
- Wednesday, October 12 Activities. Marja continues to be in India. Probably at the time you are in class, Marja, Sarvani and her new daughter Meena Gangu, will be getting on a train to visit the Taj Mahal outside of New Delhi! Tonight, you will have the opportunity to learn from Wendy Causey. Wendy Causey will discuss early childhood education. Later, Hirsh will spend some time focusing on nature journaling. And all of you will have the chance to meet in your project groups and share your journaling experiences and your Nature Journal itself.
- Readings & Assignments for Wednesday. To accompany Wendy's discussion of early childhood education, you will be reading the first chapter in John Holt's How Children Learn. You will also bring in and share your Nature Journal to date. Additionally, you will post all of your project assignments (log and reflections) to your web page.
