

Guide to Week 3

- Projects Continue this Week. It is essential that you have read carefully all of the material available to you regarding projects because you must be carrying out your project at this time. For Marja's students, you should be connecting with your "project liaison" to get an idea of valuable garden activities. Otherwise, a repeated note to Marja's students: Just do your best. If you are confused about something, don't worry. Since Marja is not available to answer questions right now, she will not be hard on anyone as you get oriented to your projects. Simply follow the directions carefully, take initiative and maybe some risk, and go for it! A sincere effort (that shows you read all the material!) is all that's expected! And, of course, posting the required assignments (log and reflections) to your web page.
- Saturday Class. You will be taking a field trip to Mt. Rainier on this day. Please follow the links to the study material that Hirsh provided in guide to week 3.
Dress warmly and in layers, it may rain or snow. Bring snacks and food to share at pot-luck.
Bring art materials and your Nature Journal.
- Wednesday Activities. Hirsh will explain this year's Libear Arts Forum activities. In general, this forum is designed to help support the dynamic relationship between students and their families. In fact, families are invited to attend. Marja will have returned and will most likely bring her own new family member along with her.
- Readings & Assignments for Wednesday. Hirsh will make available to you the reading that is expected prior to participation in the Liberal Arts Forum. Also, you are asked to read, from Leslie & Roth, Chapters 3, 4 & 5. Other assignments are as usual: post project assignments and carry out weekly journal entries.
