

Hitch-hiking legal May 20

By JOLENE UNSOELD

The legislature has passed and Governor Dan Evans has signed into law (effective May 20) the legalization of hitchhiking except on freeways where it would be a hazard. The original bill was written by Rep. Jeff Douthwaite (D-Seattle) who did his homework well. He conferred with the Chief of the State Patrol who agreed that the State Patrol would take no public stand on the bill either for or against as long as his legal aides participated in the drafting of the bill. Douthwaite also had the support of Rep. John Bagnariol (D-Seattle) and Senator Pete Francis (D-Seattle).

When the bill, titled H.B. 223, came up before the House committee on Local Government during this session of the legislature, it was well received. Dr. Kenneth Mills, Dept. of Motor Vehicles, and Officer Signey Reed of the Seattle Police Dept. testified for it. H.B. 223 passed the House by a 35 to 9 vote. Floyd Conway (R-Olympia) voted against the bill.

After this easy passage in the House, H.B. 223 began to hit some opposition. Col. Paul Johnson (assistant chief of the Washington State Patrol) testified on Wednesday, Feb. 9, at the Senate Judiciary Committee, against the bill, saying that he thought the bill was unsafe. As Gov. Evans had said in a speech as early as last November that he felt hitchhiking should be legalized, but "safety is the prime concern," this threw the Judiciary Committee into confusion and at the suggestion of Sen. George Clarke (R-King County) they attached an amendment to the bill which would make hitchhiking legal only where provided for and so posted by the highway department.

The next day, Thursday, George Andrews, State Highway Director, said that he was not in favor of the amendment because the highway department would face an extreme administrative burden under such a law. On Friday many Evergreen College students, staff, and faculty were approached to voice their opinions to individual senators concerning the bill.

The next act in the drama took place on the floor of the Senate late Saturday with a 6 p.m. deadline for consideration, after being freed by Senator Robert Bailey from the Senate Rules Committee, where it was nearly buried for this session. It was ably shepherded by Senator Pete Francis who asked the Senate to reject the amendment proposed by its judiciary committee. When Senator Robert Ridder tried to attach another amendment to require hitchhikers to be 16, Francis said, "let the parents decide whether their children are going to ride."

After a tense thirty minutes the Senate voted approval of H.B. 223 without the encumbering amendments. The next hurdle was surmounted by the careful preparation made by Douthwaite. The State Patrol remained true to its official word despite the personal opinion of its number two man and made no official stand either for or against the bill. This then made it possible for Governor Evans to sign a new hitchhiking law. Washington now falls into line with 32 other states, which allow hitchhiking from the sidewalk or shoulder of the roadway except on freeways and ramps where it is permitted only where signs specifically allow it.

All who feel they have benefitted from this change in law might remember to express their appreciation to Governor Evans, Senator Francis and Representative Douthwaite, without whom the change would never have taken place. All three may be written to at the State House, Olympia, Washington 98501.

DON REDMOND, Thurston County sheriff

Interview with sheriff

By KEN BALSLEY

Except for the fact that he wasn't wearing a uniform, Thurston County Sheriff Don Redmond would fit the stereo-type one has of a county sheriff, that is, no nonsense when it comes to enforcing the laws, but tempered with a sense of fairness.

My two hour interview with Sheriff Redmond was less of an interview than it was a lecture. I came away with the distinct impression that here was a fair man, attempting to do his job the best way he knows how, but with a total lack of knowledge of Evergreen or its students. Sheriff Redmond stated, "There are a lot of new ideas out at Evergreen that may or may not be good. I'm certainly not a judge of whether they are good or bad, and I'm not going to try and do so."

Sheriff Redmond holds the standard prejudices concerning long hairs. He doesn't like it, but emphasized many times that just because a person has long hair does not mean that he is going to be harrassed by the Sheriff's Department. He said, "You've got long hair and that's the way you want to wear it, that's your business. We don't consider you a long haired creep. If some kids think they're getting harrassment because they have long hair, I hope they're not getting it from us."

When asked if the location of The Evergreen State College in Thurston County had created any special problems, he said "no" but during the course of our conversation many problems of concern to him did arise. One of the most immediate was the traffic problem. He felt that students walking on the streets and cars going back and forth on roads that weren't designed for that much traffic was a safety hazard. He has also had many complaints regarding fast drivers. "To be honest with you," he said "we're just about ready to put a traffic control out there. Its nor harrassment. We generally don't work traffic unless we have to. When we have a problem, and that certainly is one, we'll put radar units out there to get them both ways. Its a heck of a way to have to do it, but when you tell people and have to keep on telling them and it doesn't work, of course you have to do something like that. This we will do."

Concerning the tow truck incident Sheriff Redmond is certain that there was a gun involved. I got the impression that he was upset because some form of disciplinary action wasn't taken against those involved. He felt that this was the beginning of a problem.

He went on to state that Evergreen was a new community. That in every community you need rules and regulations to go by and someone to help enforce them. "We're the ones charged with it right now and we want to do it," he said, "but we want to do it with some idea of fair justice. Our idea is to be as fair and just as we possibly can, and we really mean this."

He said one of the biggest problems was the lack of involvement on the students' part in law enforcement. Sheriff Redmond said, "Nobody wants to have their stuff 'ripped off'. You can't have a separate set of rules to work by out there at the college. You can't be 1200 individuals."

Then he went on to lecture, "If something happens out there, on that campus, that endangers a person's life, or property, then that person who is doing it should be removed from that community. It's your community, the ideas that you have there will be carried with you when you leave. If, in your community, you're going to let crime run rampant, if you're going to let the few dictate to the rest of you, if you're going to let the criminal element have his way, if you're going to let the bully operate, if you're going to let someone tell you what you are going to do, contrary to law, then where you better start looking is towards yourself and not anywhere else."

Don Redmond's greatest concern was lack of communication between law enforcement agencies and the college community. Prior to the opening of the college he had wanted to locate an information center in the library but had been

Noted cellist to perform

Soloist for the Olympia Symphony Orchestra's second concert of the season will be violin-cellist Barton Frank. He will play the "Concerto in A Minor" by Saint-Saens, and "Hebraic Meditation" by Ernest Block. The concert will be presented in the Olympic Theater, Sunday, March 5, at 8:00 p.m.

Barton Frank is well-known to concert audiences, having performed as soloist with many major orchestras in the United States and as a solo recitalist throughout North America. A graduate of the Curtis Institute of Music, he became principal cellist of the Washington, D.C. National Symphony at the age of seventeen. He later served as principal cellist of the Vancouver, B.C. and the New Orleans orchestras. He has been a protege of both Pablo Casals and Gregor Piatagorsky.

Frank left the New Orleans Philharmonic to become conductor of the symphony and violin-cello instructor at Washington State University in 1965. Presently he is on the music faculty of Western Washington State College in Bellingham, where he also conducts the college symphony orchestra.

Olympia Symphony conductor Ian Edlund noted that hearing Mr. Frank perform will be an unusual treat for Olympians, for in addition to his incredible virtuosity, he plays a rare Stradivarius instrument which is recognized as one of the finest produced by the Italian master craftsmen of the 18th century.

In addition to the two works for cello and orchestra, the program will include works by Weber, Tansman, and Rimsky-Korsakov.

Incident ethics

To "The Paper":

In reply to a letter in last week's issue of "The Paper," by Keith Stone, I felt that Mr. Stone was crying unfair to an incident to which he no more had the facts than anyone else. Seeing an incident is one thing—interpreting it is another.

Mr. Stone, your statement about black students having judgment passed upon them from certain events in our past was, in this case, a bunch of nonsense. Take a look around you. Some people do tend to look at others as individuals these days. There is a possibility that this is what President McCann is doing in this situation.

Mr. Stone, no matter what color you are, crying racism at every problem involving blacks on this campus is provoking trouble, not trying to stop it. I would definitely encourage you to look at the other side of the picture.

Rules are made for everyone's protection and for everyone to follow. I'm not saying they are all just, but I don't think it's asking too much of someone not to park their car in a certain area. Sure, I've done it once or twice, but one warning is certainly sufficient for me, and I should think it has been for others also. Things aren't getting any better as far as race relations on this campus and attitudes like yours certainly don't help matters any.

From your statements, I get the impression that President McCann as well as the Thurston County Sheriffs and "Daily Olympian" are looked upon as racists. Could it be that you are as much of a racist as you feel they might be?

Oh, yes, one more thing, Mr. Stone, according to the registrar's list of students, you do not exist, but I felt that a reply to your letter was necessary anyway. People like you are dangerous, and if, by chance you are a student at Evergreen, I hope that you will take a look at yourself.

Towing racism?

To "The Paper":

On Feb. 11, 1972, a misconstrued, second-hand account of the tow truck incident (Jan. 14, 1972) was distributed to the Evergreen Community. It was stated, in this letter, that the security office authorized tow trucks to pick up cars from the residence halls driveway, and that the one car in question had been given warning tickets four times and warned orally twice. Let it also be known that the car belonging to the driver had been towed away twice before the incident and twice since that time. Four tickets, two oral warnings, four tow ins, and one attempted tow in, is more than can be attributed to coincidence. It is quite evident that this is a deliberate design. Further inquiring with Raymaker revealed that the Thurston County Sheriff's Dept. had the last tow truck called in and while there were several other cars parked in the fire lane, the car of the driver in question was the only one towed away.

Keeping this in mind, here is an eyewitness account of the incident. On the morning in question, I had pulled into the fire lane of the residence hall to pick up some papers. I had been in the dorms for a matter of minutes when I came out and immediately noticed the tow trucks. I then noticed three truck drivers around one student. The truck drivers were holding chains and a metal hook—this was the first act of intimidation that I saw, unless one student can intimidate three truck drivers holding chains and a metal hook. When the students started appearing at the scene in a few numbers, the truck drivers backed down. (They were very hostile at first.) Now, while the language that was being used could be considered, by some, as verbal abuse and intimidation, at no time did I see any sticks, and most assuredly I saw nothing that resembled a gun. If you believe in anything, you can believe that if seven witnesses has positively identified the persons with the gun as one of our students, the Thurston County Sheriff's Dept. would have prosecuted that person or persons refusing to testify to the fullest extent of the law. It is slanderous to accuse . . . no, to find someone guilty and then choose not to take direct action. If anyone is guilty of violence by verbal and physical intimidation, I demand that they be prosecuted. However, if no action is to be taken, I demand a written apology from President McCann, for his unexcusable action. Since no action has been taken against the students involved, the Thurston County Sheriff's Dept. evidently feels that they have no case, or evidence.

According to this report, a gun check-in policy will be established on the Evergreen campus, as a direct result of this incident. For those who do not know, every campus, by law, must have a gun policy. For President McCann to connect the gun check-in policy with the incident is unfair. However, President McCann is absolutely right on one point, "the mark of a fifth rate college: the extent to which people take up their time with anything but books and ideas, and parking and traffic is always one of the chief excuses." If you look at the time passed between the incident and the date of President McCann's letter (28 days) you can see how much time he has spent thinking about it. The students involved have long since forgotten the incident, but since it has been brought back up, I feel it only fair that the records be straightened. With this done, I hope the incident can be forgotten and not repeated in the future.

Lacey park project

By DIANE SENN

Progressing with their design for Lacey's new park, Evergreen College Environmental Design, students are collecting opinion surveys from Lacey residents. The survey will produce a general idea of the park facilities needed by Lacey residents.

The student group, under the direction of Environmental Design faculty members Larry Eickstaedt, Phil Harding, Carolyn Dobbs, and Chuck Nisbet, was allocated funds not to exceed $2,970 by the Lacey City Council. The funds are being used for costs of supplies, transportation, and services connected with the project which will be completed by June 1.

Students collected surveys as they stopped by homes of Lacey residents, answered questions and explained the park project to residents. Residents not home during the people-to-people survey were left a stamped envelope, along with a note explaining the purpose of the survey. They were requested to mail the survey to the college.

Results will be compiled, and a suggested list of park facilities will be sent to residents. Lacey residents will be encouraged to include any suggestions and improvements to the tentative park facilities list. Survey results will be used not only for Lacey's first community park, but also for future recreational development.

Involvement of residents in planning the park helps establish the needs of residents and will further communication with the college's park planners. The ideas of residents will be used in designing the park facilities.

Suggestions from city officials and ideas from elementary school children also are being considered in the survey.

Anyone interested in helping with the survey, or with any phase of the park plans is asked to contact the Environmental Design Coordinated Studies group.

Seattle Rep plays Olympia

The Evergreen State College, in conjunction with The Governor's Festival of Arts is presenting The Seattle Repertory Theatre in Olympia. Produced will be two off-Broadway one-act plays; "Adaptation" by Elaine May and "Next" by Terrence McNally. Each play is a "social commentary" of sorts; each with its own form of a cutting satirical point.

"Adaptation" takes what is thought of as the "standards" of American life and turns them into a television game. Here the two medias, stage and television, come together.

"Next" is a play involving only two characters. One character is a man in his 40's who has just received a notice from his local draft board and has been instructed to report for his induction physical. The other character is his draft sergeant, who just happens to be female.

The plays will be produced at the Olympic Theatre, Sunday, Feb. 27, at 8 p.m. Tickets are: regular $5.50 and students $2.00, and may be purchased at the door, or in advance at Yenny Music and the Dean's office (L-1602).

Pet poop...

The Disappearing Task Force on pets has prepared their draft for President's council and in a meeting with Vice-Presidents Clabaugh and Shoben it was decided to go ahead and try out this draft. This plan must be in effect by March 9.

The draft would form a pet owners' association. This association would then take care of all the responsibilities for the registered pets on campus. A large and very important meeting for those persons with or who want to have pets is scheduled for Feb. 29 at 12:30 in the second floor, main entrance lobby.

A few points from the draft are as follows:

Pets shall mean any animal other than a human being that may for any reason and at any time be present on the college campus. Physical control shall mean a leash, case, or any other restraining device that subjects the pet to direct muscular control of the owner. Owners must be members of the Pet Owners Association.

Any animal or pet on college property that is not under the physical control of its owner shall be subject to impounding through the Thurston County Humane Society or the office of the Thurston County Sheriff.

Persons registering a pet must be at least 18 years of age.

No pet shall be allowed to remain in any office, room meeting place or lounge if any member of the Evergreen community or any guest of the college objects to the presence of pets.

The Evergreen Pet Owners Association will then be responsible for the implementation and enforcement of this draft, subject to review the week of May 22.

Pember and Johnston lead seminar

Responsibilities of putting news and opinions into print will be covered in depth Tuesday evening by two University of Washington Communications School professors. Their diversity of experience in journalism law and libel is expected to stimulate a broad-based treatment of "how to say it" for all interested members of the Evergreen community, especially those connected with campus communications and information dispersal.

Associate journalism Professor William F. Johnston will join Don R. Pember, an associate professor in communications law and history, for the Feb. 29 special workshop, beginning at 5 p.m. in Library 3112A.

Members of "The Paper" Co-operative, sponsors of the evening seminar, will be reviewing Seattle attorney Paul Ashley's "Say It Safely" to provide a discussion base Tuesday.

After 16 years of editorial experience at the Lewiston Morning Tribune (Idaho), Professor Johnston was the first publisher-editorial advisor of student publications at the University of Washington. He coordinated operations of the student newspaper, yearbook, campus directory and a quarterly magazine during his four and one-half years in that position.

Once on the School of Communications faculty in 1970,

Johnston initiated a statewide newspaper internship program to expand experimental learning opportunities for students in five state colleges and universities offering majors in journalism. He has stressed "real world" exposures in reporting classes also.

For example, Johnston has taught Legislative Reporting classes during the last two sessions of the Washington Legislature, assigning students to cover legislative news of regional interest to smaller daily newspapers in the state.

Last fall he was awarded a certificate of appreciation by the Washington Newspaper Publishers' Association for his work in internships and institutes for weekly editors. He is president-elect of the Washington Association of Journalism Educators, primarily composed of community college journalism teachers.

Johnston is a member of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism society, and of Phi Beta Kappa. The University of Idaho awarded him an honorary doctorate degree in 1966 for establishing "new standards of excellence for journalism in Idaho."

With experience in both radio broadcasting and newspapers, Pember has already tallied an impressive collection of published material. His first book, "Privacy and the Press," was published this month by U of W Press.

Recent articles of interest by Pember include "The Pentagon Papers Decision: More Questions than Answers" in the Autumn, 1971, Journalism Quarterly; and "Obscenity, 1971: the Rejuvenation of State Power and the Return to Roth" in the December, 1971, Villanova Law Review.

Pember's most recent media experience came as assistant city editor of the Pontiac Press (Michigan). He spent five years with weekly and daily newspapers throughout Michigan.

A member of the Washington Bench-Bar-Press Committee, Pember also is active in stimulating more interdisciplinary cooperation and study between schools of communications and law schools. To this end, in December he helped form the Association for Education in Journalism Law-Press Roundtable.

Student vote speaker

Being one of the Washington community that has gotten out and made himself heard, Art Fletcher has been quoted as stating "I'm one of the speakingest blacks ever to be in government." This former Secretary of Labor will be on The Evergreen State College campus Feb. 29, at 12 noon, speaking in lecture hall 4 on "Student participation in the 1972 election."

In addition to being Secretary of Labor, Art Fletcher has also been city councilman for Pasco, holder of the Freedom Foundation, and alternate delegate to the United Nations.

It has also been noted that Fletcher is a man who believes in the power and genius of "Young America" and the power of the 18-21 year old vote.

Internships varied

Cooperative education gained its first impetus with the demand of college students for more relevance between their curriculum and life outside the classroom. Coordinating work-learning experiences at Evergreen is Ken Donohue, Director of Cooperative Education, Dave Calof, Coordinator of Cooperative Education, and Jim Long, Coordinator of Volunteer Services.

Internships arranged by the cooperative education office help students put the theories they have learned into practice. Students learn to work in a job situation with community members. Outside experience enhances and adds to the meaning of what is learned in school.

Credit bearing work experiences are of two kinds: career learning and service learning. In career learning experiences, training or field experience is directed toward the realization of the student's career goals. These will often be arranged as contracted studies, and will include internship arrangements in such diverse fields as banking, business administration, public relations, education, and personnel management.

"In career learning, credit bearing work opportunities are arranged with business agencies, various government offices, and with other employers in the community," Ken Donohue explains.

Students may participate in full-time work with no study component, full-time work with a minimal study component, part-time work with a part-time study component, or part-time work with no study component. Each student's needs and interests are considered and he arranges credit to be earned with his faculty sponsor. Students often are paid salaries by employers for their internships.

Service learning experiences coincide with the student's college study program, and are not directed toward any specific career goal. These experiences enhance and expand classroom learning. Students give their skills, time and talent to social or community service organizations. In exchange they receive insight into the operation and purpose of social service agencies.

"The student's group coordinator or another faculty member works with the student to arrange and evaluate his internship experience," Ken informs.

turned down by the administration. "I liked the idea of having an information center on campus," he said. "But now to try and do it would probably be wrong. It would now look like you're so bad, we had to be there."

He finished with this plea "If we could come in there on an informal basis and talk, I think we could communicate. Everything isn't just black and white, the gray areas are there and thank god we have the ability to see them and adjust accordingly. What I would like to do is get a start out there. Having the faculty bring us out just isn't the answer. It's the students who have to do so." I came away from the meeting with the impression that Don Redmond was a frustrated man. He knows that the college is going to create problems and he doesn't know how to cope with them. He has his prejudices and, no matter how hard he tries to control them, they still continue to get in his way. There are laws on the books that he doesn't like and there are laws on the books that are extremely difficult for him to enforce, but he feels that he has been elected to do so and must comply. Only, how do you do it and still be fair? That is the dilemma of a county sheriff with a new college on his hands.

'Twelve Angry Men' coming

By GARY MOZEL

The outstanding feature film "Twelve Angry Men" will be shown at Evergreen next week, informed sources have reported. The screening will be in Lecture Hall one Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. No admittance fee will be charged.

"Twelve Angry Men" stars, among others, Henry Fonda, Lee J. Cobb, Ed Begley, E.G. Marshall, Jack Warden and Martin Balsam. The film points out the different roles people tend to play in group situation and could provide fresh insight into the seminar process. Twelve jurors in the film try to decide on the innocence or guilt of a young boy accused of murder. Most of the film takes place in the jury room.

Within such a confining framework, veteran director Sidney Lumet has done an amazing job. The movie received the Grand Prize at the West Berlin Film Festival and was ranked as one of the top ten films of 1957.

The film is being sponsored by the Human Development program. They hope to see a crowd the size of that attending "1000 Clowns", the last film shown in the program.
