Farm Board and trees have cleared out

by Carla Casper

The controversy surrounding the tree-cut issue led to a change in the organizational structure of the farm. The changes included the elimination of the Farm Board, consolidating three different budgets into one, and hiring a farm manager.

The Farm Board members represented Academics, S & A, Facilities, and students' interests, but the Board members had difficulty mediating for all the groups who had a stake in the farm. Academics, S & A contributed three different budgets to the farm, which created confusion during budgeting decisions.

"The three budgeting sources were each buying their own materials, and each hiring their own personnel," said Walter Niemiec, the academic representative for the Board.

According to Michael Hall, Director of S & A, the tree-cut question caused mixed reactions among the Farm Board members.

"Some people felt strongly that it should happen, some people thought that it shouldn't, and some people thought it was a complex issue." Hall said, and the anguish of going through the process was one cause of the demise of the Farm Board.

Academics took an increased interest in the farm, and last Spring proposed to diminish student input and S & A involvement in the farm. The farm is now mainly funded by Academics, which brings all budgeting decisions under one roof.

Some people think that the Farm Board may have made decisions slowly, but the farm being run by academics does not allow for democratic decision making. Students no longer have the influence they used to at the decision making level.

Niemiec, who now makes budgetary decisions for the farm, said that since the farm does represent so many areas on campus, the Farm Board or some advisory committee should be re-enshrined.

Another change at the farm is the hiring of Susan Moser as the farm manager. She takes care of the day to day running of the farm, organizes the community gardens, takes care of the farm house, and various other duties.

Most people who spend time at the farm comment that it is looking better than ever.

The clearing of the two acre area to allow sunlight into the garden is now complete. The timber was sold to the logger in exchange for some extra clearing around the farmhouse and the community garden. The clearing around the house allows for a firebreak between the house and the trees. The funds left over from the sale will go towards improvements on the farm.

The uses for the cleared area may include introducing livestock or crops.

Niemiec said that "detailed planning will go on over the summer."

Security gives their side of the gun issue

by Nathan Jones

They walk their beats alone and unarmed.

Unlike their counterparts at the University of Washington Police Department, members of Evergreen's Campus Security are prohibited from carrying firearms.

While many Evergreen students believe that Campus Security should be prevented from carrying firearms, the officers believe they are handicapped by the restriction.

For some community members, the image of armed security officers on campus would spoil Evergreen's image as a liberal, non-violent community.

In addition, some argue that the presence of guns on campus would increase the possibility of another campus shooting. As one Evergreen student remarked, "The more guns around here, the more likely it is that people will use them."

But Evergreen security officers disagree with the objections some students have about allowing security officers to carry firearms.

In a recent interview, Robert (Andy) Anderson, a four-year veteran of Evergreen's Campus Security, explained why officers believe they should be armed.

Anderson said, "We live in a world where there is no such thing as a safe haven."

The Security Disappearing Task Force charged by Vice President for Business Dick Schwartz reached this decision. In the end, though, it all came down to the budget crunch.

There were a lot of arguments presented for and against reclassifying Security as a Police Department. Security Chief Gary Russell claimed that an Evergreen police force would be more professional and have a "more legitimate" perception by the campus community.

Russell also said that the level of expertise would rise, as would morale, which is already low.

"The situation would be good for the college in the long run," Russell said of the reclassification.

But, with the ongoing state budget crisis, any increase in Security's present $250,000 budget is very unlikely. With the reclassification, officers would have to complete state police academy training at a cost of about $1,500, according to Thurston County Sheriff and DTF member Dan Montgomery.

Additionally, $1,200 to $1,500 per year would need to be spent on a link with other state and local police computer networks.

Evergreen faculty and DTF member Russ Lidman was persuaded to make a reasonable decision. DTF member Hoover Chambless agreed with Lidman's view.

The DTF members generally agreed that Security as a whole needs evaluation and that potential alternatives need discussion. They also agreed that Security is doing a pretty good job now, despite the low morale.
by Polly Pauw

TWO THIN CRACKS IN A CORBLESTONE ROAD, a student produced theater piece, opened last night in the Experimental Theatre. The performance combines drama, dance, music and mask to present a portrait of humankind learning to understand his/her own duality and creative urges. "It's just a madcap safari adventure," says Libby Wood.

Originally entitled LIEGO MY EGO: TRANFORMATIONS NOT JUST FOR BREAKFAST ANYMORE, TWO THIN CRACKS uses common elements in creation myths as a metaphor for human creativity. The play follows a character and also our race, from "voidness" to conception, birth, adolescent confusion, cynical resignation, and finally a grand finale of bemused understanding or total despair.

The show is EVERGREEN's first successful educational and major production through collaboration. The script was written by a team of students, and all 38 members of the cast have grown to understand their role in the story. The script was written by a team of students, and all 38 members of the cast have grown to understand their role in the story. The play follows a character and also our race, learning to understand his/her own duality and creative urges.

"It's just a madcap safari adventure," says Libby Wood. Originally entitled LIEGO MY EGO: TRANFORMATIONS NOT JUST FOR BREAKFAST ANYMORE, TWO THIN CRACKS uses common elements in creation myths as a metaphor for human creativity. The play follows a character and also our race, from "voidness" to conception, birth, adolescent confusion, cynical resignation, and finally a grand finale of bemused understanding or total despair.

The play follows a character and also our race, learning to understand his/her own duality and creative urges. "It's just a madcap safari adventure," says Libby Wood. Originally entitled LIEGO MY EGO: TRANFORMATIONS NOT JUST FOR BREAKFAST ANYMORE, TWO THIN CRACKS uses common elements in creation myths as a metaphor for human creativity. The play follows a character and also our race, from "voidness" to conception, birth, adolescent confusion, cynical resignation, and finally a grand finale of bemused understanding or total despair.

The play follows a character and also our race, learning to understand his/her own duality and creative urges. "It's just a madcap safari adventure," says Libby Wood. Originally entitled LIEGO MY EGO: TRANFORMATIONS NOT JUST FOR BREAKFAST ANYMORE, TWO THIN CRACKS uses common elements in creation myths as a metaphor for human creativity. The play follows a character and also our race, from "voidness" to conception, birth, adolescent confusion, cynical resignation, and finally a grand finale of bemused understanding or total despair.

The play follows a character and also our race, learning to understand his/her own duality and creative urges. "It's just a madcap safari adventure," says Libby Wood. Originally entitled LIEGO MY EGO: TRANFORMATIONS NOT JUST FOR BREAKFAST ANYMORE, TWO THIN CRACKS uses common elements in creation myths as a metaphor for human creativity. The play follows a character and also our race, from "voidness" to conception, birth, adolescent confusion, cynical resignation, and finally a grand finale of bemused understanding or total despair.

The play follows a character and also our race, learning to understand his/her own duality and creative urges. "It's just a madcap safari adventure," says Libby Wood. Originally entitled LIEGO MY EGO: TRANFORMATIONS NOT JUST FOR BREAKFAST ANYMORE, TWO THIN CRACKS uses common elements in creation myths as a metaphor for human creativity. The play follows a character and also our race, from "voidness" to conception, birth, adolescent confusion, cynical resignation, and finally a grand finale of bemused understanding or total despair.

The play follows a character and also our race, learning to understand his/her own duality and creative urges. "It's just a madcap safari adventure," says Libby Wood. Originally entitled LIEGO MY EGO: TRANFORMATIONS NOT JUST FOR BREAKFAST ANYMORE, TWO THIN CRACKS uses common elements in creation myths as a metaphor for human creativity. The play follows a character and also our race, from "voidness" to conception, birth, adolescent confusion, cynical resignation, and finally a grand finale of bemused understanding or total despair.

The play follows a character and also our race, learning to understand his/her own duality and creative urges. "It's just a madcap safari adventure," says Libby Wood. Originally entitled LIEGO MY EGO: TRANFORMATIONS NOT JUST FOR BREAKFAST ANYMORE, TWO THIN CRACKS uses common elements in creation myths as a metaphor for human creativity. The play follows a character and also our race, from "voidness" to conception, birth, adolescent confusion, cynical resignation, and finally a grand finale of bemused understanding or total despair.

The play follows a character and also our race, learning to understand his/her own duality and creative urges. "It's just a madcap safari adventure," says Libby Wood. Originally entitled LIEGO MY EGO: TRANFORMATIONS NOT JUST FOR BREAKFAST ANYMORE, TWO THIN CRACKS uses common elements in creation myths as a metaphor for human creativity. The play follows a character and also our race, from "voidness" to conception, birth, adolescent confusion, cynical resignation, and finally a grand finale of bemused understanding or total despair.

The play follows a character and also our race, learning to understand his/her own duality and creative urges. "It's just a madcap safari adventure," says Libby Wood. Originally entitled LIEGO MY EGO: TRANFORMATIONS NOT JUST FOR BREAKFAST ANYMORE, TWO THIN CRACKS uses common elements in creation myths as a metaphor for human creativity. The play follows a character and also our race, from "voidness" to conception, birth, adolescent confusion, cynical resignation, and finally a grand finale of bemused understanding or total despair.

The play follows a character and also our race, learning to understand his/her own duality and creative urges. "It's just a madcap safari adventure," says Libby Wood. Originally entitled LIEGO MY EGO: TRANFORMATIONS NOT JUST FOR BREAKFAST ANYMORE, TWO THIN CRACKS uses common elements in creation myths as a metaphor for human creativity. The play follows a character and also our race, from "voidness" to conception, birth, adolescent confusion, cynical resignation, and finally a grand finale of bemused understanding or total despair. The play follows a character and also our race, learning to understand his/her own duality and creative urges. "It's just a madcap safari adventure," says Libby Wood. Originally entitled LIEGO MY EGO: TRANFORMATIONS NOT JUST FOR BREAKFAST ANYMORE, TWO THIN CRACKS uses common elements in creation myths as a metaphor for human creativity. The play follows a character and also our race, from "voidness" to conception, birth, adolescent confusion, cynical resignation, and finally a grand finale of bemused understanding or total despair.

The play follows a character and also our race, learning to understand his/her own duality and creative urges. "It's just a madcap safari adventure," says Libby Wood. Originally entitled LIEGO MY EGO: TRANFORMATIONS NOT JUST FOR BREAKFAST ANYMORE, TWO THIN CRACKS uses common elements in creation myths as a metaphor for human creativity. The play follows a character and also our race, from "voidness" to conception, birth, adolescent confusion, cynical resignation, and finally a grand finale of bemused understanding or total despair. The play follows a character and also our race, learning to understand his/her own duality and creative urges. "It's just a madcap safari adventure," says Libby Wood. Originally entitled LIEGO MY EGO: TRANFORMATIONS NOT JUST FOR BREAKFAST ANYMORE, TWO THIN CRACKS uses common elements in creation myths as a metaphor for human creativity. The play follows a character and also our race, from "voidness" to conception, birth, adolescent confusion, cynical resignation, and finally a grand finale of bemused understanding or total despair.
Empowerment party: fun in sun

by Steven Aldrich

Last Thursday two bright blue cardboard police officers wearing yellow shades and black cardboard belts and guns stood guard on either side of a stereo system that filled Red Square with the voice of Les McCann who asked, "Try to make it real compared to what?"

Across the columns of the Library Building, a banner hung (below a few swallows' nests) that explained the scene. "Community Empowerment Party/Good Times for All!" it proclaimed.

A diverse group of students had decided it was time to empower the people, provide them with information, have a good time and create school spirit. Or so said one of the students.

"Many people do not know there is a DTF studying security's request to become a police department. They don't know there is anything happening with governance. They don't even know Security wants to be a police force. We want them to know and we want them to get involved," Matt Detering said.

The community basked in the noonday sun, played volleyball, threw frisbees, read, and sat on the grass talking.

Then faculty member Helena Knapp stepped up to the microphone.

"Interdependence provides safety because everyone is watching out for each other, but when people try to create safety independently they have to arm themselves and rely on threats to hurt rather than to help other people," Knapp said.

The same thing is true about problems solving, the said, and on this campus people tend to solve their problems independently.

"On an international level we are also trying to create safety independently, and as a result are less safe. Missiles and guns decrease, not increase, personal safety," she said.

Two mimes, Marlene and Mary, next did a performance they call "The Barrier" in which they break through an invisible wall in order to embrace each other. Then they did a dance to the recorded monolog of Gil Scott-Heron, who said, "The revolution will not be televised, give you sex appeal, make you look five pounds thinner."

Dave Campbell, a student coordinator, and several other people circulated a petition stating the signs were against arming and reclassifying security.

Mandy Goldberg spoke about what is, and isn't, happening with governance and encouraged people to get involved.

Bob Hornbein said, "Evergreen is an alternative community where everyone can have a say in what happens. At least that's the philosophy. In reality people in positions of power are making decisions without consulting us. This bugs the crap out of me."

People stopped playing in the sun to shout back "NO!!" when he asked if security being reclassified as a police department and carrying guns made them feel safe.

"Police departments are for internal control of communities," Hornbein said.

Eric Smith had made a statement at the Governance Symposium the previous day. "We need to make governance fun," he said.

Common Cause: groove music that makes everybody wanna dance

by Tsukasa Sekizaki

Common Cause, the six piece groove band from Seattle, will return to Olympia to headline the Evergreen Graduation Dance on Friday, May 31, at the Governor House Hotel.

The band, a collective of musicians representing five northwest islands last summer. In the meantime, we'll be busy performing in clubs in the area.

Q: What is your musical concept as a band?

CC: Funky, spontaneous, tight, responsive.

CC: We'll do some recording this summer, we'll be busy performing in clubs in the area.

Q: You've performed at Evergreen before; do you like playing for Greeners?

CC: Evergreen audiences are the best. They're appreciative and responsive.

Q: What are your future plans?

CC: Evergreen audiences are the best. They're appreciative and responsive.

Q: How would you describe the Common Cause sound?

CC: We like doing funk and fusion, but we're not locked into any one particular style. We concentrate on laying down a thick rhythm and we just groove it from there. Our objective is to make you move. We'll do it any way we can - playing funk, wave, soul, rock, oldies, covers, originals... whatever.

Q: The name Common Cause seems to imply a political connotation. Are you a "political band"?

CC: No. But that doesn't mean that as individuals we don't have a political consciousness. Our Common Cause focuses on our belief in playing music that makes us happy, regardless of what idiom or style that may be; our coming together as friends and musicians to express our artistic concepts; and to make lots of money. (Laughs) Really, we hate to be pigeon-holed by a musical classification. We've been called a funk band, cover band, casual band, Asian American band, and we are all and none of those things. We just like to play music and have a good time.
Reader thanks other reader

I'd first like to commend Tom Cummins for taking the courageous step of expressing a minority opinion in the face of flag-waving hordes. I think he raises a good point. The trouble with celebrating what is right about this country is that it is so easy to forget that there is so much that is wrong. So the trouble with patriotism for me is that I feel the need to stand up for the country that I love even as Americans begin to realize that the face of flag-waving hordes, even as Americans begin to realize the so-gradual destruction of the integrity of a sovereign nation free to make their own decisions, so that college students should support the revolutions for freedom and change that are occurring throughout the world. I would like to say that Tom, and that's why patriotism for me doesn't come easy.

One interesting statement was, "...the vast majority of the American people support the country and the idea of a peaceful dialogue, and a clear recognition of the rights and needs of all human beings." I think Tom sees that many of the laws and systems of our country are excellent and ought to be defended. Also the relative security we enjoy inside these borders should be the natural right of all human beings.

The trouble with celebrating what is right about this country is that it is so easy to forget that there is so much that is wrong. So the trouble with patriotism for me is that I feel the need to stand up for the country that I love even as Americans begin to realize that the face of flag-waving hordes, even as Americans begin to realize the so-gradual destruction of the integrity of a sovereign nation free to make their own decisions, so that college students should support the revolutions for freedom and change that are occurring throughout the world. I would like to say that Tom, and that's why patriotism for me doesn't come easy.

One interesting statement was, "...the vast majority of the American people support the country and the idea of a peaceful dialogue, and a clear recognition of the rights and needs of all human beings." I think Tom sees that many of the laws and systems of our country are excellent and ought to be defended. Also the relative security we enjoy inside these borders should be the natural right of all human beings.

Greener would kill for coke

Dear Evergreen Community:

Why is Pepsi the only cola available on this campus? I have been told that the University of Washington has a number of students with a 'Pepsi' background. I'm sorry, but I've been out running around or playing softball and I'm dying of thirst. I would kill for a Coke. Unfortunately, some higher power has determined that the students here at Evergreen aren't able to choose our own refreshments. The Pepsi Challenge was quieted last year. Well, Pepsi sucks. I mean it.

Still searching for The Real Thing, S. L. Roberts

Big Mountain needs big $$$

To the Editor;

Since this is my last chance to express my opinions as a student at Evergreen, I have decided to state a few of them.

I recently returned from a trip to Big Mountain and was astounded by the people there. They are suffering. Their real estate is empty, and there is no one living on the land that rightfully belongs to them. They do need support. People are living in different ways. The Legal Support office in Flagstaff is in need of office supplies and also needs more funds to continue their work. I can get more information by writing them at:

Big Mountain Legal Defense Office, Lou Cerwit, 124 San Francisco Street, Flagstaff, Arizona.

You can also go to support group meetings. There is a group here that meets in the Lecture Hall on Mondays. On Tuesdays there is the Mountain Legal Clinic. There are also groups that meet in the Front Range and the Front Range. There are also groups that meet in the Front Range and the Front Range.

Meetings with Dick Schwartz and others have shown that there are many issues that need to be addressed. Our politicians are not doing enough to help us. We need to be more active and organized to make a difference. Only through action can we bring about change.

The lead author can be reached for consultation on editing for libel and obscenity. Letters to the editor must be typed, double-spaced, limited to 250 words, and no later than noon on Monday for that week's publication. All other inquiries should be directed to the Evergreen student newspaper at The Evergreen State College, Campus Activities Building, Room 306. Phone 866-6000, x 6213. All are welcome to attend open office hours.

Reader asks for compassion

To the Editor and "Michael "Scott" Harmon;" The cartoon appearing in the May 9 issue of the CPJ entitled "The Kuan" is very sad. I have spent too little thought, even less skill and no compassion whatsoever. I was just thinking of the people who determined to support their cause, they can do it again.

Big Mountain needs big $$$

To the Editor;

Since this is my last chance to express my opinions as a student at Evergreen, I have decided to state a few of them.

I recently returned from a trip to Big Mountain and was astounded by the people there. They are suffering. Their real estate is empty, and there is no one living on the land that rightfully belongs to them. They do need support. People are living in different ways. The Legal Support office in Flagstaff is in need of office supplies and also needs more funds to continue their work. I can get more information by writing them at:

Big Mountain Legal Defense Office, Lou Cerwit, 124 San Francisco Street, Flagstaff, Arizona.

You can also go to support group meetings. There is a group here that meets in the Lecture Hall on Mondays. On Tuesdays there is the Mountain Legal Clinic. There are also groups that meet in the Front Range and the Front Range. There are also groups that meet in the Front Range and the Front Range.

Meetings with Dick Schwartz and others have shown that there are many issues that need to be addressed. Our politicians are not doing enough to help us. We need to be more active and organized to make a difference. Only through action can we bring about change.

The lead author can be reached for consultation on editing for libel and obscenity. Letters to the editor must be typed, double-spaced, limited to 250 words, and no later than noon on Monday for that week's publication. All other inquiries should be directed to the Evergreen student newspaper at The Evergreen State College, Campus Activities Building, Room 306. Phone 866-6000, x 6213. All are welcome to attend open office hours.
Creature visited Mayans over 500 years ago!!!

by Phineas Phenssetter

The campus was rocked today by reports of a Russian scientific study that has caused a sensation. It appears that a team of Russian scientists has discovered evidence that a being from another world visited the Mayans over 500 years ago.

Students appeared listless as if nothing really mattered anymore, and some classes were cancelled. Said one Greener, who wished to remain anonymous, "I think we all feel pretty betrayed by this."

Neither college President Randy "Red" Farkle, nor any of the trustees were available for comment. This fueled rumors that the governor had requested their presence at a special meeting to discuss the crisis. The controversy arose over the genetic legitimacy of a skin scraping that was taken from the back of old Ben's neck for identification purposes when he tried to cash a check at a local bank. Problems reared their ugly heads when the sample failed to unlock the door. As a matter of fact, we're now considering letting her take up permanent residence there with a studded leather whip, a set of Encyclopaedia Britannica and a stereo that will play 'Hail to the Chief' on full tilt over the campus PA system.

"It's a goodness governed governance issue already! Didn't I say that?" said a flustered, red faced Farkle, as he buttoned up his pants and started the long stagger to the administration's bozo-teria.

"I just want to say once more that we were only looking for a broom," Flintstone asserts.

Are the Russkies right? Is old Ben really an alien?

photo by We Don't Know Who Drunken funsters invade TESC

by Barney Google

A new ferority (combination fraternity and sorority) has been started on the Evergreen campus. This group of students proudly proclaim themselves the Phi Kama Kazis.

"Our motto is 'Dive, dive, dive,'" said ferority President Peggy Kazis. "We’re into sitting around and drinking a special blend of alcohol—the ingredients are a secret, but it’s basically lethal. We call these drinks ‘Hari Kari Coolers’ and you better believe we’re serious about all this stuff."

"I've been invited to their annual paper bag over the head road trip," Farkle went on to say. "I think it’s a good thing. Sensory deprivation is a lot like education. You must forget all you ever learned to be mindless enough to get a job with a liberal arts degree. Of course, they don’t go anywhere, but, shucks, it’s a good thing for students to get involved in and it keeps them from getting involved in campus governance.

"Yes, it may be well and fine for these students to carry on like a bunch of lunatics. Yet the question does come to mind as to whether they are really learning anything."

"I can fix a mean gin and tonic," said ferority member Jenny Silvernoodle. "One part paint thinner, one part tonic, splash it in a gareas can and pour it over your head. Big fun for all."

Still, besides bartending school, what can these kids accomplish with their lives?

"It’s like this, man. Me and baby-chick, my girlfriend, can do lotsa things," said pledge Stanlee Stingdoodle. "Well, like...uh, like, uh...well, lotsa things, man..."

"This is a new chapter in the history of Evergreen. One that surely will be edited when it comes out in book form."

What the new campus group uses for its group frivolity

Wild Assortment!

PRETTY PANTIES

3 for Only

A keg o’ Green Death

All colors...all style panties in nylon tricot with or without lace trim.

Photo by someone else

PHONEY

Prescriptions Filled

Come have FREE COFFEE with us on Sundays

VILLAGE MART

3210 Cooper Point Rd. NW 866-3999

RENTAL MOVIES AVAILABLE

FRIED AND BARBECUED CHICKEN

JoAnn’s Pancake Syrup...12 oz...$1.19 (reg. $1.99)
Butter...1 pound...$2.19 (reg. $2.59)

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

California Oranges...6 for $1

FREE DELIVERY for Senior Citizens within 4 miles

121 W. 6th
Olympia 357-7232

BEN MOORE’S
Cafe & Bar

our mascot... “Goeduck”
Announcing
Live : STEVE LUCENO TRIO

Friday May 31st, Saturday June 1st.

Dinner set at 7:00 Dancing at 9:30

NO COVER

“The burger was stunning!”

The Cooper Point Journal “Hamburger Review”

Union House Starbucks’ Coffee

Bar Hours Mon-Sat 11am-2am

The Ever Dapper English Style Hangover Ice Bag

MEN’s UNDERWEAR

Horde ‘em up!

For Only

A case o’ Coors Gold

Colorful prints, bright solids or whites in T-tops, shorts, briefs.

RAUCHENBUSH
MOTOR SUPPLY

TIGER TIRES Sale

TIGER TIRES Sale

SIZE/Steel Radial/Price

155/80R12 195-0215 25.95
155/80R13 195-0315 32.50
165/70R14 195-0315 34.95
175/60R14 195-0315 37.85
165/80R14 195-0516 37.85
175/70R14 195-0516 37.85

OPEN 7 days a week

May 31, 1985

POWER MOWER

SUNDAYS 8 AM - 10 PM

Free Delivery for Senior Citizens within 4 miles with minimum of $25 order.

THE EVERGREEN ENQUIRER

May 31, 1985

POWER MOWER

BARBECUED CHICKEN

FRIED AND BARBECUED CHICKEN

Mrs. Butterworth’s Pancake Syrup...12 oz...$1.19 (reg. $1.99)
Butter...1 pound...$2.19 (reg. $2.59)

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES

California Oranges...6 for $1

FREE DELIVERY for Senior Citizens within 4 miles

121 W. 6th
Olympia 357-7232

BEN MOORE’S
Cafe & Bar

our mascot... “Goeduck”
Announcing
Live : STEVE LUCENO TRIO

Friday May 31st, Saturday June 1st.

Dinner set at 7:00 Dancing at 9:30

NO COVER

“The burger was stunning!”

The Cooper Point Journal “Hamburger Review”

Union House Starbucks’ Coffee

Bar Hours Mon-Sat 11am-2am

The Ever Dapper English Style Hangover Ice Bag

MEN’s UNDERWEAR

Horde ‘em up!

For Only

A case o’ Coors Gold

Colorful prints, bright solids or whites in T-tops, shorts, briefs.

RAUCHENBUSH
MOTOR SUPPLY

TIGER TIRES Sale

TIGER TIRES Sale

SIZE/Steel Radial/Price

155/80R12 195-0215 25.95
155/80R13 195-0315 32.50
165/70R14 195-0315 34.95
175/60R14 195-0315 37.85
165/80R14 195-0516 37.85
175/70R14 195-0516 37.85

OPEN 7 days a week

May 31, 1985

POWER MOWER

SUNDAYS 8 AM - 10 PM

Free Delivery for Senior Citizens within 4 miles with minimum of $25 order.

THE EVERGREEN ENQUIRER

May 31, 1985

POWER MOWER

SUNDAYS 8 AM - 10 PM

Free Delivery for Senior Citizens within 4 miles with minimum of $25 order.
ANGRY: BOX O' SMELL SUX

by Edgar Angry

When I heard about what goes on in and around the so-called "Free Box," it was all I could do to keep myself from blowing my breakfast clear from here to Sunday.

Do you know what people do there?

You may want to sit down before you read this. Now get this—people sleep in it!!! BLEAH! I wouldn’t even lie in my dead dog, Rex, sleep in there in that box.

That box is a public health menace, as you well as the east stairs in the CAB, you know that wafting aroma—it's surely the scent of billions and billions of herpes germs! The only way to miss the stench is to wear a gas mask or have a bad cold.

I have such a hard time even running past the "reek box" that I can't imagine people wanting to spend hours at a time in it. I won't try to share the disgust I feel when I see someone trying on female undergarments or others of the morning. It's worse than seeing a dead rabbit in the ditch by the side of the road.

But I've got an answer to this in creasingly fragrant problem. See, what we do is to move the El Reeko Rag DTF and the El Reeko Box into the CPRag’s renowned quizmaster and funny guy Laurian Weisser, Dahlia Tubers, and Bob Barker (world famous renouned quizmaster and funny guy capitalist).

As DTF Chair, I have charged Olde Ben to give me an answer by June 6 at noon, or else.

The DTF plans to hold it’s next meeting during the next Rag production schedule. Rumor has it that many a drunken orgy takes place with nubile, 17 year old nymphomaniacs from Capitol High School during the production. I assure you that the smell in the room will be better than to do to that hassle us all the time? We're all tired, cranks and stressed out about the shit you incessantly fling on us. Hey, I didn't know the guy was insane that quote. It wasn't my fault. I never saw the gun. What? That's something else. Just go take a nice long flying fuck at the moon, OK? We never had all this before. I'm just going on a long Road Trip when this whole bloody mess blows over. Now get outta here, yeast breath. The moon's a long way away and you have a lot of fucking work to do to get there."

"To quotes like this, may the Cooper Rag Jug be left to rot in Siberia, where the whole idiotic Commie staff truly belongs."

ANGRY: BOX O' SMELL SUX

eden: A change of plans leads to premature death. Don't leave your bed. Unusual entertaining may be possible, as long as the police don't find out.

VIPRO: Job opportunities dry up for good. You'd best move somewhere warm because you'll be outside a lot. Smooth out. A co-worker will work for you on today.

LIBRA: The day favors fun activities, but make sure you partner brushes and flowers first. In love, you'd best be forewarned. A child will ruin your year.

SCORPIO: Best control your moody tantrics today, your boss is watching. Everywhere you go there are one-way glass mirrors. Be careful what you touch, jerk, or else. Germs may appear in the oddest of places.

SAGITTARIUS: You’re not the one to bend. The thought of all this will be well as you have no one likes you at all. Local travel may be dangerous. Avoid things with wheels.

CAPRICORN: Home activities are spotlighted by search and destroy handbook-activities and a full range of delusions. The lack of hippies on campus. Once again, the managing Editor said, "Don't spin. Don't turn. Just keep going."

MIND FUZZERS: Who was the first woman ever to drink three six packs of beer in space all in the same sitting while whistling "Louie Louie"?

What was the maiden name of Ladybird Rinkleenstorm?

How many editors did it take to invent trivia quizzz.....

Why did Colonel Sanders change his name from E. Manley Stinger?

Who is Clarissa Clespaddle's butt size and who was her mother?

What time is it and are you late for class?

Shouldn’t you be doing something constructive rather than reading this gunk food no-newspaper?

MIND FUZZERS

I have just about had all I can take. I am angry and frustrated. I am at the point where rational thought does nothing to assuage the rage at which I am feeling. Furthermore, I can’t hold all this in anymore. It’s about time I voiced my opinions. First, I think that Facilities should let the cliff swallow it. I think that shit falling from the sky is what I call the "real world" is all about. Ask a real person, a real Liveroom will tell you that a little rain must fall. Second, I very angry about the lack of hippies on campus. Once upon a time this place was full of hippies, but now no hippies. I think hippies are an important aspect of Evergreen—one that is grossly misunderstood. Third, and surely most important, let’s settle this damned "issue issue."

Depressed, I’ve been watching you. With big doubts, A.E. Newman

Hey Bozos: free personal ads in this year's last issue of the COOPER POINT JOURNAL!!!

Let someone special know you care! Let someone awful know you don’t! Let your teacher know your true feelings

See your words in print! Be a minor celebrity in the community at your own bidding!

We promise not to tell your mother!

Tomorrow’s horoscopes, mind fuzzers, stupid letters

If you were born today, too bad. You are a total goofus. You think too much, you walk the east stairs will never like you. Give up. Go somehow far away (like Boston or Washington or Sedro Woolley or something) and never come back or ever. Thanks.

ARIES: Anger on your part will be met by retaliation by your enemies. Still, you mustn't feel optimistic. You’ll be met by retaliation by your enemies. The moon's a long way away and you have a lot of fucking work to do to get there."

"To quotes like this, may the Cooper Rag Jug be left to rot in Siberia, where the whole idiotic Commie staff truly belongs."

CAPRICORN: What was the maiden name of Ladybird Rinkleenstorm?

How many editors did it take to invent trivia quizzz.....

Why did Colonel Sanders change his name from E. Manley Stinger?

Who is Clarissa Clespaddle's butt size and who was her mother?

What time is it and are you late for class?

Shouldn’t you be doing something constructive rather than reading this gunk food no-newspaper?

MIND FUZZERS

I have just about had all I can take. I am angry and frustrated. I am at the point where rational thought does nothing to assuage the rage at which I am feeling. Furthermore, I can’t hold all this in anymore. It’s about time I voiced my opinions. First, I think that Facilities should let the cliff swallow it. I think that shit falling from the sky is what I call the "real world" is all about. Ask a real person, a real Liveroom will tell you that a little rain must fall. Second, I very angry about the lack of hippies on campus. Once upon a time this place was full of hippies, but now no hippies. I think hippies are an important aspect of Evergreen—one that is grossly misunderstood. Third, and surely most important, let’s settle this damned "issue issue."

I’m sick of issues. I won’t put up with them anymore and it mean.

Regards, R. Michael Rimshtom

Dear Idioteer, I’ve been watching you. With big doubts, A.E. Newman

The Evergreen Enquirer
BIG FUN ROADTRIP

by Mike McKenzie

With a lack of any kind of bigger fun, a delegation from the Evergreen Enquirer decided to take a free beer road trip.

But first, we had to ask ourselves, "Just where can we get free beer?" The answer was just a short drive away—the Olympia Brewery.

As we waited for the brewery tour to begin, we caroused through the gift shop. You should have seen it, they've got just about beer everything.

While the rest of the staff eyeballed beer pool cues, beer teddy bears, beer garbage cans, floating key chains, belt buckles, towels, and even beer spare automobile tire covers; this reporter caught a few quotes from the cashiers, Gwyn and Steve, in the giftshop.

"Just what do you sell the most of?"
"T-shirts go a lot," Steve said.
"Well, then, what's the weirdest thing you sell?"
"Beer cookies," Gwyn said.
"Well, then, what's the second weirdest thing you sell?"
"Probably Do Its," Gwyn said.

So with this information, the EE'ers were soon gathered around a box of Do Its, which are like scarves or bandanas or something like that only much cheesier. But the price was right—a regular four dollar value marked down to twenty-five cents. Needless to say, they sold a few Do Its that day.

Those of us who bought Do Its were quick to tie them around our necks, and thus attired, we began the tour.

Joe Stamey, our tour guide, told us all sorts of things about the history of the brewery. If you're interested in hearing about stuff like that you should go take the tour, because, if you were to read it all here, it would ruin Joe Stamey's rap.

So, anyway, Joe was a real nice guy. He wore one of those white smocks with one of the brewery's tiresome slogans embroidered on his left breast and his name tag sewed on his right breast. In his right hand he held a metal pointer.

Joe kept pointing at things and talking. He was the kind of guy you could trust because he talked like a real person.

Joe told us all about the recycling they do at the brewery. He showed us a video tape of "Old George in the recycling room." Then he told us what to do with our empties.

"Take 'em back to the distributor—we'll buy 'em back," Joe told us.

Joe explained that brewery work is real boring. But don't despair for the workers in the brewery, there's four different jobs and the workers are rotated every hour.

Joe told us all about how many times they wash the recycled bottles and kegs. He said they use a bunch of solutions and rinses, they even brush the kegs and check inside them with a flashlight.

It's hard to say just exactly why, but when Joe said that when they refill their containers "they've done their very best to clean them," you just had to believe him.

Joe seemed to be an endless resource of figures and statistics. He said something about how the brewery pumps out about 150,000 cases of beer and about 4,200 kegs of beer per day.

Did you know that Washington grows about 75 percent of the U.S. hop crop? Well, Joe told us that, too.

And he also explained that malt liquor has more malted barley and less hops. That's why it "sneaks up a little faster," Joe said.

Of course the "spent grains" are sold to local farmers and that's why some of the happiest cows and pigs around live in this area.

Joe led us into the brewery. Perhaps the most poignant thing about this part of the tour was that it smelled like that carpet in our production manager's apartment after the EE party.

Just exactly how much does it cost the brewery to make a bottle of beer? "It's a secret!" as far as Joe knows. But he did say that making the containers costs more than the product "by a long shot."

Next Joe launched into a real scientific explanation of the brewing process. He told us about the "louder tub," which is just like a "great big coffee pot." Then he showed us that big control panel where everything is monitored and he quoted some figure on the mega-bucks the brewery pays in taxes each year.

We were then led to the storage tank area where they have eight hundred of these huge tanks. If you drank a quart of beer every day, it would take you 342 years to drink one of these tanks of beer.

At last, we were on our way to Hospitality Room. But before we got to sample the goods, Joe told us that they serve their beer at 42 degrees farenheit. Also, they pour the beer straight down into glass so it'll foam up and release gas.

Letting beer slide down the side of the glass "is a no-no," said Joe.

So there we were sucking up all the beer we could. Anytime any one of us wanted another glass, Joe or the other bartender, Fred Metcalf, would fill it up again.

Finally our photo editor kicked over our managing editor's glass and Fred had to come clean it up. I couldn't help but ask "Say, Fred, do you ever have trouble getting people to leave?"

You could tell there was a bit of sarcasm in the way Fred answered.

"Aw, nooo," he said, shaking his head.

IT'S THE WATER AND THE ONLY PLACE WE'VE EVER GOTTEN FREE BEER
by Tim O’Quamanagador

The Evergreen Athletic Department is going after a new image and they're serious about it.

What image? Evergreen has big plans to thrust into Big-Time College Sports. No, we're not just going to pussyfoot in basketball and baseball; the college is going to get tough with football, boxing and hockey teams.

"We've got an image here at Evergreen that says, 'We're a passive school.' Well, that's why we get hurt. Evergreen that says, 'We're a passive school.' Right rep," College President Randy "Thunderbuns" Farkle said last weekend.

The Evergreen Athletic Department is going after a new image. Plans for Evans Stadium have been approved and construction will begin this summer. Completion is expected prior to the start of the 1986 football season. Boxing and Hockey will also be accommodated. Where the Pavilion now stands is the site for the Beer Garden Sports Arena.

"Just think about it. Instead of students spending their evenings in the A-dorm or hanging out around the Corner or hanging out around the A-dorm pool table, students will flock to the Beer Garden," said college athletic director William Barnum.

Though the college has plans for the new sports program it still needs coaches. This is where the sports controversy begins. While Farkle and Barnum are ready for a "get tough" program, there is still pressure from the old school. The old school faculty and alumni feel things should be done the Evergreen way.

The Evergreen way would need a coach with a different philosophy than Farkle or Barnum. If the coach was appointed for Evergreen Way qualities, it is likely that a present faculty member will get the coaching nod.

Leading candidates as faculty coaches are Tom Rainey and Thad Curtz. But the possibility of a faculty coach isn’t likely. If the Athletic Department is going to go to the trouble of Big Time Sports they will hire big-time coaches, not namby pambly Evergreen philosophy coaches.

I was given a chance to interview one of the football coach candidates. The Athletic Department has asked me not to reveal any choices yet, but I will say he is an assistant at a major, big time fun sports school. Here is part of the interview.

The Evergreen Enquirer: Are you familiar with the Evergreen philosophy?

Candidate: Well, President Farkle has convinced me his main concern is that I provide a winning football team. And that’s the only philosophy I’ll need here.

TEE: Are you familiar with Evergreen?

C: I understand it’s a gem in the rough.

Tee: Have you ever heard of a Greener?

C: Bill Barnum mentioned something about those. Sound like pansies to me. But I’m an open minded individual, and as long as those things can hit, what’s the difference?

The sports program is getting active at Evergreen and is planning to accommodate the new image. Plans for Evans Stadium have been approved and construction will begin this summer. Completion is expected prior to the start of the 1986 football season. Boxing and Hockey will also be accommodated. Where the Pavilion now stands is the site for the Beer Garden Sports Arena.

"Just think about it. Instead of students spending their evenings in the A-dorm or hanging out around the Corner or hanging out around the A-dorm pool table, students will flock to the Beer Garden," said college athletic director William Barnum.

Though the college has plans for the new sports program it still needs coaches. This is where the sports controversy begins. While Farkle and Barnum are ready for a "get tough" program, there is still pressure from the old school. The old school faculty and alumni feel things should be done the Evergreen way.

The Evergreen way would need a coach with a different philosophy than Farkle or Barnum. If the coach was appointed for Evergreen Way qualities, it is likely that a present faculty member will get the coaching nod.

Leading candidates as faculty coaches are Tom Rainey and Thad Curtz. But the possibility of a faculty coach isn’t likely. If the Athletic Department is going to go to the trouble of Big Time Sports they will hire big-time coaches, not namby pambly Evergreen philosophy coaches.

I was given a chance to interview one of the football coach candidates. The Athletic Department has asked me not to reveal any choices yet, but I will say he is an assistant at a major, big time fun sports school. Here is part of the interview.

The Evergreen Enquirer: Are you familiar with the Evergreen philosophy?

Candidate: Well, President Farkle has convinced me his main concern is that I provide a winning football team. And that’s the only philosophy I’ll need here.

TEE: Are you familiar with Evergreen?

C: I understand it’s a gem in the rough.

Tee: Have you ever heard of a Greener?

C: Bill Barnum mentioned something about those. Sound like pansies to me. But I’m an open minded individual, and as long as those things can hit, what’s the difference?
Editor: have you driven a Ford lately?

A Love Story
by John Chiapetta and Brian Raiter

Dave Bartholomew. Graduate student, also Groton College. Age: 25. A man puzzled not by his own emotions, but by those of others.

They've collided before, but this time they'll collide in the Twilight Zone.

Dave was nervous about being out so late. It was 7:30 in the evening, and on the other side of the door before him, he knew, Professor Whitecliff waited. Maybe she really did want to discuss his master's thesis. He doubted it.

She was sitting on the edge of her desk when he went in. So much for the thesis thesis.

"The thesis thesis," he said to himself. He liked the sound of that, and tried to say it three times fast. "What?" said Carol.

He hesitated. "The thesis thesis; the theory that you asked me here to talk about my master's thesis. Care to comment, professor?"

"Dave," she said, massaging her temples, "I'm sorry. I pushed too hard."

"Damn right!"

"Dave, please. I understand how you feel. If we can't be lovers, can we at least be good friends?"

"No, and now I'm going to eat you," he said, turning into a werewolf.

Carol tried to scream, and failed.

Farkle: I don't care how much face they suck, it's still a governance issue!

NEKKED!!! It's still a governance issue, says BOB by Wendi "Lookout!" Kerrasshh!!

Over 100 Greeners got together in a recording studio yesterday, under a sign reading "Check Your Clothes at the Door," to record a paean to world unity and beach nudity: "We Are The Nude."

The effort brought together several of Evergreen's most notorious figures, including Evergreen Enquirer editor Mike McKenzie, who sang a special solo to begin the song.

"We are the nude, we are the naked," sang McKenzie, clad only in a BOB sweatband. After the recording session, Mike chugged from a can of stale, lukewarm Oly and talked about his participation in the project.

"It's important to me that I do something of social significance before I graduate," he said. "That's what Evergreen is known for, right? Anyway, the BOB crusade is the perfect cause for me."

"We Are The Nude" will sell for $2 at all area record stores, with all proceeds going to the BOB fund. Additional contributions can be sent to BOB, CAB 306, Olympia, WA, 98505.

Remember: BARE THE WORLD.

WARNING

NOW IMPROVED LUXURIOUS

Enquirer DeLUXE Truss

INSTANT POLLSTRAP ADJUSTMENT

NO LACES!

Not an advertisement

COOL, WASHABLE 3-PLY MIRACLE MATERIALS! UNEXCELLED RELIEF AND COMFORT. ADJUSTABLE, PULLED TOWARD ONE LEG, ADJUSTABLE PADS TOWARD THE OTHER. FOR REDUCIBLE INGUINAL HERNIA. NO LACES—ADJUSTS WITH PULLSTRAPS.

$1,000 a day
Not an advertisement

EFFERSYLLIUM®
BULK LAXATIVE PLEASANT TASTING

To Your Health!

Vitamins and Minerals in a Delicious Sherry Wine Tonic.

"Which contains enough alcohol to kill almost anything that moves before you can say, "Hey bartender, another Southern Comfort!" Great for you manic-depressives!"

"We Are The Nude"
You Again, Or Someone
When I grow up
nothing will be the same.
When I grow up,
these dank labyrinths
will be gay humid avenidas,
this morose throng
will be the song of rainbows whistling, this daily redemption
will be a memory of a strange hour.
When I grow up
I will see you again, or someone.
I am almost gray. Get ready.
Craig Oare

FRIDAY MAY TWENTY-FOURTH
This day rose bitter & hot like the taste of blood iron dread caught between the teeth
I woke this day choking on the reek of a troubled passion and worry for an absent friend
this day reality wavers
like the realms of nightmare
high-voltage tension seeking ground.
Rosaline Gorsline

In Front of Bay-View
artesian spring
piped through rock
underground water
mumbles to itself in the parking lot.
cryptic word

The Genius Considers
The genius sits in the chain restaurant (1100 nationwide) and drinks coffee that makes his palms sweat;
smokes menthol cigarettes that taste of cordie and burn
much too fast;
considers all the waitresses bodies, smiles, demeanor;
considers all the polyester and John Deere hats;
all the glibness that abounds in these places;
considers the stares from the pancake eaters in the non-smoking section;
considers the fact that Plato invented the superbowl and God invented everything else (except possible bailbondsmen);
considers criminal thoughts since the coffee will be paid for in pennies.

W/in Brackets
I am an admirer of brevity
A simplification: She was overwhelming
so I took doses.
I felt I felt I was not getting her (right/down).
To appease previous obligations I had
I had to slow down
and speed up and
not show either.
I had a self-destructive urge
to over-done,
I put her in a picture-frame put her in a poem,
put her in a memory.

4-18-morning
Sheets of glass
pressed on my face
One by. One by. One
they become warm to the touch and curve around bones until my cheek is exposed to you
and your pulse moves
with my breath
maleable glass, this mask
In time. In time. In time.
I move to uncover
A longing. A hunger
night desires
Daylight vibrations
.A connection
with you
Barbara Zelano

Too late,
to see the circle
embracing the square,
the ample bite the rotund,
the Apple-chitter in the corner,
the times they move so quickly now.
it takes a lot
just to keep up with the moment,
I'm trying to say:
the circle in the square
is the web of our people,
I'm telling you:
that circle in the square
is the bird's-eye view
down the long stem
of the microscope,
and we can see the view from here.

Yup, I dream of the days
When I will sit down
Smelling strongly, richly
Of goat and black earth
From the very bottom of my pores
And with the same funky pleasure
As from some sniffing a fart
You will say to yourself
Oh, hey he smells gooood...

J. W. Renaud

Robert Haines

Terry Miner
To the Evergreen Community:

The Evergreen State College, as defined by its planners, was an idealist's dream. The planning faculty and students worked together as peers, dictating college policy, designing the curriculum and learning from one another. This vision wasn't simply a facet of the late 1960's: the notion of higher education being a partnership between student and instructor is as sensible and realistic as ever. Few colleges have ever been more driven, in practice, than Evergreen. In 1985, it exists, an campus-wide forum for open discussion among faculty, staff, and students about the various issues that concern this college. The curriculum is determined by faculty members two years in advance, with minimal input on the part of the student at all. Every year, the likelihood that the dean will approve a group contract designed by students dwindles, and fewer students even know they have the right to propose a group contract of studies as a group. The absence of communication about the governing process is a very serious problem, and the students want to be informed. As one student, Man- dy Goldberg, pointed out at last week's governance symposium, trying to gain access to information about Evergreen is like trying to use a library without a card catalog. We cannot expect this institution to continue to represent the ideals of inter-disciplinary, non-competitive, direct democracy and direct participation of students. We must unite ourselves in thinking that our faculty, many of whom came from traditional education backgrounds and are beginning to show signs of exasperation on at least some aspects of the Evergreen experience, will continue to champion the cause of alternative education if we don't represent our case at this college remains unchanged.

There is an overpowering need to integrate students more fully into this structure.

Let me pose a few questions for those of you who are Evergreen students: Do you know what decision-making bodies exist at this college? If you had a grievance or suggestion about your program or its faculty, who would you go to? Has your campus information center ever helped you get information about any subject of importance? Are there programs or modules that you would like to see incorporated into the curriculum? Have you learned anything about curriculum-planning or about any other aspect of the governance process by reading the CPR or listening to KAXO? Do you know what a DTP is? If so, do you know what campus issues are currently being studied by DTP?

There is little question that the quality and availability of information about governance on this cam- pus is mediocre. Here are some questions:

In the last week's CPR article about the governance symposium, one current faculty member and former student was paraped as saying that when he was a student here, he remembered "the faculty being very frustrated as they tried to motivate students to get involved in governance issues." According to the author of the article, he was the faculty member who made this remark. The statement was actually made by another alumna who is not a faculty member. This error on the part of the CPR reporter demonstrates that they misrepresent me completely, because it's indicative of the careless and half-hearted coverage that the entire governance process has received in the CPR.

The CPR article on the governance symposium failed to mention at least two crucial issues which were raised at the symposium. First of all, several speakers expressed a need to revive the Evergreen Council, a governing body in which faculty, staff, and students are all represented. This council currently exists, but it has been relatively powerless for the past decade. Also, Kenny Defensor discussed the impor- tance of incorporating governance into the curriculum. Students could be taught to study various campus issues and make recommendations about these issues as part of their academic work. Personally, I con- sider this idea to be an exciting and academically fruitful way of in- tegrating students into the govern- ance process.

Goverance is the central issue at Evergreen. We are fortunate to have a new president who recognizes this fact and who is eager to create new lines of communication on the cam- pus. I urge all of us to discuss govern- ance issues among ourselves, to de- termine our own and better access to in- formation, and to act willingly and responsibly with regard to issues that affect the future of alternative education at Evergreen.

Thank you.

Victor Shames, Visiting Faculty.

A week after symposium, students still uninformed

by CPR Staff

Barely a week has passed since the governance symposium's plea for participation, and now the destiny of this institution is undetermined by a minority of private citizens.

The Community Empowerment (LGRC) answering machine. In both cases, the chief administrative officers...to the future of this institution will be determined from the start, and will not be closed to the public. The rational for closing the meetings seemed to be twofold: to protect community members from undue concern and because the ad- minaire method of inviting participa- tion is mediocre. Here are some questions:

In the last week's CPR article about the governance symposium, one current faculty member and former student was paraped as saying that when he was a student here, he remembered "the faculty being very frustrated as they tried to motivate students to get involved in governance issues." According to the author of the article, he was the faculty member who made this remark. The statement was actually made by another alumna who is not a faculty member. This error on the part of the CPR reporter demonstrates that they misrepresent me completely, because it's indicative of the careless and half-hearted coverage that the entire governance process has received in the CPR.

The CPR article on the governance symposium failed to mention at least two crucial issues which were raised at the symposium. First of all, several speakers expressed a need to revive the Evergreen Council, a governing body in which faculty, staff, and students are all represented. This council currently exists, but it has been relatively powerless for the past decade. Also, Kenny Defensor discussed the impor- tance of incorporating governance into the curriculum. Students could be taught to study various campus issues and make recommendations about these issues as part of their academic work. Personally, I con- sider this idea to be an exciting and academically fruitful way of in- tegrating students into the govern- ance process.

Goverance is the central issue at Evergreen. We are fortunate to have a new president who recognizes this fact and who is eager to create new lines of communication on the cam- pus. I urge all of us to discuss govern- ance issues among ourselves, to de- termine our own and better access to in- formation, and to act willingly and responsibly with regard to issues that affect the future of alternative education at Evergreen.

Thank you.

Victor Shames, Visiting Faculty.

A week after symposium, students still uninformed

by CPR Staff

Barely a week has passed since the governance symposium's plea for participation, and now the destiny of this institution is undetermined by a minority of private citizens.

The Community Empowerment (LGRC) answering machine. In both cases, the chief administrative officers...to the future of this institution will be determined from the start, and will not be closed to the public. The rational for closing the meetings seemed to be twofold: to protect community members from undue concern and because the ad- minaire method of inviting participa- tion is mediocre. Here are some questions:

In the last week's CPR article about the governance symposium, one current faculty member and former student was paraped as saying that when he was a student here, he remembered "the faculty being very frustrated as they tried to motivate students to get involved in governance issues." According to the author of the article, he was the faculty member who made this remark. The statement was actually made by another alumna who is not a faculty member. This error on the part of the CPR reporter demonstrates that they misrepresent me completely, because it's indicative of the careless and half-hearted coverage that the entire governance process has received in the CPR.

The CPR article on the governance symposium failed to mention at least two crucial issues which were raised at the symposium. First of all, several speakers expressed a need to revive the Evergreen Council, a governing body in which faculty, staff, and students are all represented. This council currently exists, but it has been relatively powerless for the past decade. Also, Kenny Defensor discussed the impor- tance of incorporating governance into the curriculum. Students could be taught to study various campus issues and make recommendations about these issues as part of their academic work. Personally, I con- sider this idea to be an exciting and academically fruitful way of in- tegrating students into the govern- ance process.

Goverance is the central issue at Evergreen. We are fortunate to have a new president who recognizes this fact and who is eager to create new lines of communication on the cam- pus. I urge all of us to discuss govern- ance issues among ourselves, to de- termine our own and better access to in- formation, and to act willingly and responsibly with regard to issues that affect the future of alternative education at Evergreen.

Thank you.

Victor Shames, Visiting Faculty.
Budget cut merry-go-round: when will it ever end?

by Carla Casper

Evergreen has hopped aboard the budget cut merry-go-round once again. This time the school must answer the $750,000 question—where will the cuts come from, and why are we doing it again?

This round of budget cuts comes from the projected revenue shortfall, estimations of the State budget. In both the House and Senate budget proposals, Evergreen faced 3 to 7 percent cuts in our 1985-1987 budget.

Although the legislature hasn't been able to put together a budget yet, the general feeling in the Evergreen budget office is that whatever budget does come out of the state legislature for higher education won't support Evergreen at our current monetary level. We are looking at a 3 to 7 percent cut in our current budget.

Unlike the previous 10 percent budget-cut exercises, this round of cuts was not caused by a directive from the governor's office.

President Olander instructed the four main sectors of the college's academics, student services, business office, and student services to come up with tentative proposals of cuts in their areas.

According to Provost Patrick Hill, who is in charge of organizing academic, this round of cut proposals, academics is doing an exercise in cutting between 2 and 5 percent of each portion of the budget, and the other three main sectors must create ten practical cuts of from 4 to 7 percent of their funds.

Academics is only allowed to cut up to 5 percent of their budget, because state law requires Evergreen to maintain a minimum of one student to student on an enrollment basis. Thus, academics cannot be across the board, and, because of previous budget cuts, nothing is left to cut horizontally. But budget cut decisions are going to be made with the understanding that all four sectors of the college are interwoven. Any cutting decisions in one area will have repercussions in the other areas.

A progress report from academics, student services, college relations, and the business office will be presented to President Olander on June 3. He will soon choose representatives from all four groups to help him form an overall budget cut plan, "I will be calling certain people up to talk to them," he said. The proposals will be submitted to the Board of Trustees. They will make the final budget cuts later this year.

Dean David Marr, member of the recently formed Temporary Budget and Planning Committee for Academics, said, "We've done it at this point in time. We're coming to grips with the fact that we'll be proposing cuts." The committee members include five faculty members: Rudy Martin, Nathan Cocker, Ronald Bludcr, Michael Beug and Lynn De Damaan. They represent varying faculty fields from the arts to the sciences. All the deans are also on the committee, and two student representatives.

The committee is considering 7 criteria for evaluating the cuts in academics. While looking at a program, the committee members will consider: the following: Student feedback for the program, whether it's a high priority to students or not, the quality of the faculty and student performance within a program, whether the program can be cut as a unit, or if it is a necessary portion of an integrated program, the cost per student in the program, if the program is offered at other state schools or is unique to Evergreen, if the program is critical to the mission of the college, and, lastly, the amount of faculty support for a program. While making academic budget cut recommendations, the committee is focusing on the central mission of the college. At least 15 definitions of the central mission of the college are floating around. "We are certainly a college with an emphasis on quality undergraduate education, and coor- diated studies," said Patrick Hill. When the committee is evaluating a program one question is "how much of a program is being cut?" The proposal recommendations eliminating are not definite, but "it's a list of where we have to begin if we have to," said Espinola. At best, student services would have to eliminate $54,000 from the 1985 budget. To accomplish this, the staff position in the documents section of the library and the electronic media producer would be cut.

For students this would mean limited access to documents check-out, and, out to the 16 track recor- diing studio would only be available to students who have prior experience.

Faculty member Terry Sott, who is in charge of the academic budget class, said, they've had about 3 exercises in cutting their budgets. "We're down to the bone as it is," she said.

Some staff positions would be eliminated if the 7 percent cut goes into effect. Without staff to help students check-out equipment, students will have hard time gaining access to it. The staff positions cut- ing decisions in one area will have repercussions in the other areas.

"I'm saying, okay, maybe, I'm not recommending that students be cut, but that is not likely to happen." Sott said that the morale of the people team will suffer.

Budget cut anguish begins all over again

by Rowland Zoller

This spring six Evergreeners, together with student and faculty from Garfield Elementary School, have been working on an educational and rewarding academic enterprise—the Garfield Garden Project.

Working within the local public school system, these interpell interns are teaching gardening to over 170 children in the first and fourth grades. A large orange and white box complete with raised beds, composting area, and passive solar greenhouse, provides a unique hands-on learning environment for both the interns and the schoolchildren involved.

"Organic gardening is the vehicle we use to teach children a sense of individual awareness, and some motivational living skills," said Tom Stohler, an Evergreen senior involved with the project.

"Hopefully, this experience can help them realize that everyday lives and provide them with the beginnings of an environmental ethic they can use and expand upon as they grow older. We also try to instill in the kids a sense of the arts to the sciences. All the deans are also on the committee, and two student representatives.

"Feeding out how a compost pile works can be a pretty il- luminating experience to a child. Or to an adult."

and their teacher presented the "Garfield Garden Project" with a card you work for their card done this quarter.

One problem the garden faces is a shortage of enthusiastic, self-motivating interns and/or volunteers to continue the project next fall. "We are working to increase our internship pool in the academic community," said Stohler. "We're officially part of the Ecological Agriculture program for next year and even have a description written up for the new catalog. We'll be getting hurt," and "I'm really doing two modules at a time," said Sott.

"We are certainly a college with a program one question is "how much of a program is being cut?" The proposal recommendations eliminating are not definite, but "it's a list of where we have to begin if we have to," said Espinola. At best, student services would have to eliminate $54,000 from the 1985 budget. To accomplish this, the staff position in the documents section of the library and the electronic media producer would be cut.

For students this would mean limited access to document check-out, and, out to the 16 track recor- diing studio would only be available to students who have prior experience.

Faculty member Terry Sott, who is in charge of the academic budget class, said, they've had about 3 exercises in cutting their budgets. "We're down to the bone as it is," she said.

Some staff positions would be eliminated if the 7 percent cut goes into effect. Without staff to help students check-out equipment, students will have hard time gaining access to it. The staff positions cut- ing decisions in one area will have repercussions in the other areas.

"I'm saying, okay, maybe, I'm not recommending that students be cut, but that is not likely to happen." Sott said that the morale of the people team will suffer.

Budget cut anguish begins all over again

by Rowland Zoller

This spring six Evergreeners, together with student and faculty from Garfield Elementary School, have been working on an educational and rewarding academic enterprise—the Garfield Garden Project.

Working within the local public school system, these interpell interns are teaching gardening to over 170 children in the first and fourth grades. A large orange and white box complete with raised beds, composting area, and passive solar greenhouse, provides a unique hands-on learning environment for both the interns and the schoolchildren involved.

"Organic gardening is the vehicle we use to teach children a sense of individual awareness, and some practical living skills," said Tom Stohler, an Evergreen senior involved with the project.

"Hopefully, this experience can help the children realize that everyday lives and provide them with the beginnings of an environmental ethic they can use and expand upon as they grow older. We also try to instill in the kids a sense of the arts to the sciences. All the deans are also on the committee, and two student representatives.

"Feeding out how a compost pile works can be a pretty il- luminating experience to a child. Or to an adult."

and their teacher presented the "Garfield Garden Project" with a card you work for their card done this quarter.

One problem the garden faces is a shortage of enthusiastic, self-motivating interns and/or volunteers to continue the project next fall. "We are working to increase our internship pool in the academic community," said Stohler. "We're officially part of the Ecological Agriculture program for next year and even have a description written up for the new catalog. We'll be getting hurt," and "I'm really doing two modules at a time," said Sott.

"We are certainly a college with a program one question is "how much of a program is being cut?" The proposal recommendations eliminating are not definite, but "it's a list of where we have to begin if we have to," said Espinola. At best, student services would have to eliminate $54,000 from the 1985 budget. To accomplish this, the staff position in the documents section of the library and the electronic media producer would be cut.

For students this would mean limited access to document check-out, and, out to the 16 track recor- diing studio would only be available to students who have prior experience.

Faculty member Terry Sott, who is in charge of the academic budget class, said, they've had about 3 exercises in cutting their budgets. "We're down to the bone as it is," she said.

Some staff positions would be eliminated if the 7 percent cut goes into effect. Without staff to help students check-out equipment, students will have hard time gaining access to it. The staff positions cut- ing decisions in one area will have repercussions in the other areas.

"I'm saying, okay, maybe, I'm not recommending that students be cut, but that is not likely to happen." Sott said that the morale of the people team will suffer.
PIRG questions integrity of U. S. Dept. of Energy

by Brett Redfearn

Oftentimes when the issue of Hanford and the disposal of nuclear waste comes up, people respond: "Well, ya know, they have to put it somewhere." A common misconception is that WashPIRG is solely fighting to keep this plutonium production site out of the state of Washington. The real concern is that the safest place be found for this growing bulk of spent fuel. In following the political process that will decide the fate of this waste, and perhaps the state, WashPIRG acts to see that this process is carried through with integrity: that the three "best sites" for a nuclear repository are truly those.

The integrity of the United States Department of Energy (USDOE) is in question. Washington State has been given to take on the role of keeping their site-selection process in check. Meanwhile, a rift is forming between the state and federal governments.

This rift will be significant in the further processes that may unload 77,000 tons of high-level radioactive nuclear waste into Washington. Although the decision should be based on safety, Hanford's nomination as a potential site is believed due to political expediency.

One of the political reasons why Hanford was nominated was the cooperation of the state with the federal government. When Washington was under the leadership of Governor Spilman, the state was all too willing to deal with the USDOE. Unlike other states chosen as potential sites, Washington formed a state Nuclear Waste Board (NWB). The NWB willingly started to negotiate a Consultation and Cooperation (C&C) agreement with the federal government. This "agreement" could hardly be called that, and despite much consultation there was no such cooperation. The C&C revealed that the USDOE will hear what Washington State has to say, although they may choose not to listen.

Fortunately, the state has begun to take a more active role in question various issues. The first major point of dissection between the state and the USDOE has been that the USDOE is unwilling to include Defense Wastes in the C&C agreement. The inclusion of procedures for handling defense wastes in the C&C is crucial, as any decision is to be based on the impact different Hanford facilities make on the surrounding environment. This question of defense wastes is a battle still being fought between the state and the USDOE.

The second major discussion between the USDOE and the state arose when the draft Environmental Assessment (EA) was released. The draft EA contains studies done by the USDOE that assess the environmental characteristics of the potential nuclear repository sites.

The draft EA done at Hanford not only contains insufficient data, but its siting guidelines are "ambiguous and contain several potential defects" making it "hopelessly flawed" according to the Washington Commissioner of Public Lands. These siting guidelines alone have been cause enough for the state to file a lawsuit against the USDOE. This litigation is significant in showing an attempt by the state to take a stand in dealing with the USDOE, further revealing the growing rift between the two governments.

Washington has entered into another law suit, this one with the State of Nevada. This case involves the state's fight for an agreement to date with their own data. Past experience has shown that the USDOE is not a reliable data source. The outcome of the Nevada case will set a precedent for future federal policies. If Nevada is successful, then Washington will probably be able to get funds for their own data collecting activities.

It sounds like it must have been a pretty fun tournament to put together. But Klockner found out differently.

"It takes up a lot of time, a belluva lot of time," said Klockner. After spending the last couple weeks setting it up, and the better part of last week organizing the tournament, Klockner (and Chotzen, who also competed, had difficulty concentrating on playing tennis."

"If I did it again I wouldn't be in it," Chotzen said.

Also Klockner considered his feeling about doing it again: "We wouldn't want to run it and play"

They also said it was difficult because they were still organizing games while they were on the court, in the middle of the match.

Yet others enjoyed the fun of the organizers' labors—the winners.

EVERGREEN MEMORIAL DAY TOURNAMENT WINNERS

Men's Singles: Doubles, Ed Ford of Olympia; Intermediate, Mark Myers of Shelton; Beginners, Don Vygen of Black Diamond.

Women's Singles: Kathleen Noel of Black Diamond.

Women's Doubles: Advanced, Tim Haan and Danny Richardson; Intermediate, Dennis Karris and Rich Wills.

Competitors in tennis tournament find rewards through play and work

by Tim Quan

The Evergreen Memorial Day Tournament, held last weekend, was Evergreen's alternate fund raiser. After the Run for Your Mom and the Geoduck Gallop it was time for a fund raiser for another cause.

The tournament was put on by two members of the Evergreen Tennis team, Rocky Klockner and Ben Chotzen. Klockner and Chotzen felt that athletes interested in helping with the fund raiser put on by the Athletic department would have more interest in getting something out of their participation than in collecting pledges.

The Evergreen Memorial Day Tournament was an all-comers event. It cost five dollars to enter, and for entry fee, tennis players were treated to a weekend of complimentary tennis. The tournament started Friday night and continued until Sunday.

Forty athletes entered in six divisions. The tournament was successful, and brought the Athletic department some $200.

"It went pretty well," commented Klockner. "We sold all our tickets, and we were glad they entered."
The Student Health Center and the McClane Fire Department will offer free instruction in Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR) the first Tuesday and Thursday of each month. The class will be held at the Student Health Center from 12 p.m. to 1 p.m.

In accordance with the College's Academic Progress Policy for Financial Aid, your academic record must indicate completion of 12 credits for each quarter of half-time enrollment (6 credits for each quarter of half-time enrollment) in order for you to remain eligible for financial aid. "Incomplete" and "outstanding" credits completed. If you are expecting to receive financial aid in the next academic year, you need to discuss the financial aid consequences of such actions with a financial aid counselor.

Fees

estival Parking Pass:

- Students: $35
- Non-Students: $60

Parking passes are available at the Box Office or online at www.evergreen.edu/parking. Parking passes must be purchased by June 2.

Performing Arts

Saturday

"Varents," 9 p.m., donation encouraged. A world premiere in four movements for experimental orchestra, performed by the NAO ensemble and conducted by Jeffrey Morgan. Improvisation Workshop 10 a.m.-3 p.m., COM 209. $10. Ed Trujillo will give this "Hands-on" workshop. Sign up in COM 324.

Sunday

More Ultimate Frisbee 3-5 p.m., Athletic Fields. Open to all disc-ers, beginners too.

Bus and Mechanics Roadshow 9 a.m.-1 p.m., 126 So. Patton. Intergency Transit's annual event. The public is invited to cheer on their favorite drivers.

Tuesday

Volleyball and Pickleball Noon-1 p.m., Red Square. Also on Thursday.

Wednesday

Olympia Zen-Kai Zen and Meditation 7:30 p.m., Rotunda. Free, bring a pillow.

Jazz at the Rainbow, 9 p.m., no cover. Bob Meyer performs every Wednesday night.

Recent Developments in EL Salvador 2:30 p.m., Cab 110. Also 7:30 p.m., Timberline Public Library, E. 8th and S. Franklin. Jose Escobar and Sue Walker will speak.

Presented by Students for a Humane Foreign Policy in cooperation with the Central American Action Committee. For further information, call 352-2681 or 660-6000, ext. 6144.

Resume Writing Workshop Noon-1 p.m., Lib 1213. If you are interested in how to use a resume, and what it takes to write a resume, this workshop is for you. For further information, call Career Planning and Placement, 660-6000, ext. 6193.

Art Galleries

Evergreen Art Gallery Two The Evergreen Photography Exhibit, featuring works by advanced photography students studying with Bob Haft and Tracey Hamby. Through June 9.

Office of Student Activities

Call 866-6000 ext. 6193 for further information on how to make a contribution to either or both of these causes, please send or bring your contribution to the President's office, Lib 3109.